Eisler Found Guilty of Contempt Of Congress

Communist to Be Sentenced June 27; Trial of 16 Others Temporarily Halted

By Robert Bruskin
Post Reporter

Gerhart Eisler, said by the House Un-American Activities Committee to be the "supreme authority" of Communists in this country, was found guilty yesterday of willful contempt of Congress.

The first of 21 defendants to be tried on similar charges this month, the small, bald, German-born Communist will be sentenced June 27, Justice Alexander Holtzoff announced. He was released on bond of $20,000.

Judge Holtzoff was ordered temporarily to halt the trial of 16 members of the board of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee by the United States Court of Appeals late yesterday.

The 16, including five women, went on trial immediately after the Eisler verdict. Defense Attorney O. John Rogge, former assistant United States Attorney General, filed a petition asking Judge Holtzoff to remove himself as judge in the trial because of "bias and prejudice."

Mandamus Writ Sought

Holtzoff denied the petition. Rogge immediately asked the Court of Appeals for a writ of mandamus compelling removal of Judge Holtzoff.

Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner stopped the trial of the 16 until he could hear the pleas of the attorneys at 4 p. m. today. No attorneys were present when the decision was reached.

Rogge declared in his petition that Judge Holtzoff had been legal adviser to FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover during the period when the organization was under investigation. Hoover, it said, accused the organization of being a "Communist Front." The petition was filed on behalf of Dr. Edward K. Barsky, chairman of the organization and medical director of the International Brigade in Spain during the civil war.

The charge made by Barsky was similar to that earlier made by Eisler.

Jurors Closely Screened

In his own courtroom at a bench conference, Judge Holtzoff held that Barsky's petition was inadequate and that it came too late.

After his refusal, prospective jurors were closely screened for potential bias. Before the trial was halted seven were eliminated through peremptory challenges and one for cause. Prosecutor Charles B. Murray removed three more.

The 16 defendants are charged with contempt of Congress and conspiracy to withhold records from the committee.

Eisler faces a sentence of from one month's imprisonment, or $100 fine, to a maximum of a year's imprisonment and $1000 fine.

Eisler goes on trial again for passport frauds next Wednesday, nine days before he is to be sentenced for the contempt charge.

Ex-Commander Of Navy Airport Held in Theft

Mobile, Ala., June 10 (AP).—The Federal Bureau of Investigation announced today the arrest of Comdr. Dolph Chadwick Allen, 50, on a charge of theft from Bronson Field near Pensacola, Fla.

J. J. Gleason, of the FBI field office here, said two truck loads of property marked United States Navy valued at "well over $5000" had been located on Allen's estate on Perdido Bay in Baldwin County, Alabama.

A Navy career man and a native of California, Allen served as commanding officer of Bronson Field from August to November, 1946. He was retired in January, 1947.

Allen was released in $2500 bond pending grand jury action.

1.4 Billion Bushels

Wheat Crop Will Shame '46 Buster

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

This year's wheat crop was estimated at 1,409,800,000 bushels yesterday, or more than a quarter of a billion bushels greater than last year's all-time record crop.

Winter wheat alone, the Crop Reporting Board of the Department of Agriculture predicted, will reach an amazing 1,093,071,000 bushels. Last year 873 million bushels were harvested.

The June 1 prediction is 134 million bushels higher than the May 1 prediction. This reflected the enormous crop now being reaped in Texas and Oklahoma, where the yield in some fields is running almost double the pre-harvest predictions.

The forecast indicates the United States this year will raise a crop equal to 27 per cent of the entire world production of 1945, the last year for which figures are available.

Half-Billion Bushels for Export

The crop is of such tremendous size that it will permit continuation of wheat exports at the present rate of more than half a billion bushels a year.

By June 30 it is expected that America's shipments abroad will total 550 million bushels for the 12 months since last July 1.

The board did not estimate the year's prospective corn crop. It

House Rejects Two Agency Shakeup Plans

Senate Can Still Keep USES in Labor Dept., Merge Housing Units

The Republican House yesterday sounded taps for President Truman's Reorganization Plan No. 2 to keep the United States Employment Service permanently in the Labor Department.

The House Expenditures Committee meanwhile voted to kill Reorganization Plan No. 3, merging nearly all Government housing agencies and functions in one Housing and Home Finance agency.

The committee indicated approval, however, of Reorganization Plan No. 1, retaining organizational changes made in the Agriculture Department, the Treasury and some other agencies under Title 1 of the First War Powers Act.

Still Chance for Plan

Reorganization plan No. 2, blocking return of USES to the Federal Security agency, and strengthening the Labor Department in two other respects, was rejected by a voice vote following three hours debate.

The plan will go into effect nonetheless on July 1 unless the Senate also rejects the plan by that date.

The housing agency merger similarly will become effective July 27 unless both Houses reject it.

The President presented all three plans under authority given him in the Reorganization Act of 1945 to reshuffle agencies in the interest of economy and efficiency.

The 1945 law specified that all recommended shifts take effect unless both houses reject them within 60 days after submission to Congress.

Senate Hearing Tuesday

The House Expenditures committee vote against Reorganization Plan No. 3, merging housing agencies, was 11 to 3. The Senate Banking Committee ordered open hearings next Tuesday on the housing shift. To date, the Senate has acted on none of the plans.

In addition to keeping USES permanently in the Labor Department, Plan No. 2 rejected yesterday by the House:

1. Transfers the functions of the administrator of the wage and hour division to the Secretary of Labor, to be directly subject to his control. The Fair Labor Stand-

Policemen Face Trial

Student Fined as Disorderly, Cleared of Drunk Charge

Daniel J. Fitzpatrick, 22-year-old Georgetown University student on whose charges two policemen have been suspended, yesterday was found not guilty of intoxication.

Municipal Court Judge Nadine Gallagher, however, found the youth guilty of disorderly conduct and suspended a $5 fine pending appeal.

As he went to trial, formal charges were served by Police Department officials against the two policemen who arrested Fitzpatrick six days after his first arrest on May 29. Both policemen testified against the student in yesterday's trial.

Fitzpatrick was arrested in the Hoya Inn, 1300 36th st. nw., by Pvt. James A. Stewart, jr., of 5701 N. 10th rd., Arlington, Va., and another policeman. At that time, they charged him with intoxication and disorderly conduct.

On June 4, Fitzpatrick was arrested by Stewart and Pvt. Warren L. Garrett, 32, of 1549 35th st. nw., as he waited for a streetcar at Wisconsin ave. and M st. nw. He was charged with disorderly conduct and later said he was beaten. The June 4 disorderly conduct charge against him may come up in Municipal Court today.

Meanwhile, Stewart is charged with five counts—wilfully maltreating and using unnecessary violence toward a prisoner; conduct unbecoming an officer; drinking alcoholic beverage while off duty and in uniform; knowingly making an untruthful statement to a superior officer and neglect of duty.

Garrett is charged with neglect of duty, conduct unbecoming an officer and making an untruthful statement to a superior.

Charges against the two came after police investigation of the Meat Prices Soaring to New Highs

Unlimited Buying For Export Blamed For 6-10-Cent Rise In Most Area Stores

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

The high cost of being carnivorous mounted even higher here yesterday.

Meat prices, more particularly those on beef and lamb, jumped 6 to 10 cents a pound in most stores in this area, with many choice cuts selling at prices above black market levels of OPA days.

Those stores here which did not raise prices yesterday said they would follow suit today or tomorrow "when we start selling our new supplies."

Everyone in the business agreed that this city was a victim of "outside trends" and not of undue profiteering within the area.

Similar Rises Throughout East

Similar price rises reported throughout the East, with new prices on beef and lamb and some cuts of pork running higher than on the day after price controls were lifted.

European demands in an American market of supply and demand were blamed by the experts for the price increases.

Yesterday's marking up of prices, said wholesalers here, specifically reflected the price rises at the Nation's stockyards when the yards reopened for business after the long Memorial Day holiday.

Industry spokesmen in New York and Philadelphia said foreign bidders for meat for export were willing to pay up to four cents a pound above American wholesalers. And a four cents rise at wholesaler level is equivalent to an 8 to 10 cent rise at consumer level, they said.

"Within the last few weeks, agents of buyers in England, Germany, Poland, Belgium, Holland, France and other countries in that part of Europe have been buying everything they can get here in slaughtered meat," explained Jack Kranis, president of the National Meat Industry Council in New York.

Wholesale Prices Rising

A meat buyer for a Washington chain said wholesale prices of beef have risen 1 to 1.5 cents a pound weekly for the past four weeks. Up to yesterday, he said, most of the increases were absorbed by the stores.

Another chain reported only veal and ham prices remained unchanged. Steaks, porterhouse and sirloin, averaged a 10-cent-a-pound increase over last week's prices, with porterhouse selling yesterday at 89 cents a pound.

An independent retailer, dealing only in choice, corn-fed cattle, said his steaks were selling yesterday at $1 to $1.25 a pound in contrast to 90 cents to $1 a week ago. He blamed high production costs and a sharp decrease in prices renderers are paying for waste fats.

Mayor in Rescue Of Alabama Negro From Lynch Mob

Hurtsboro, Ala., June 10 (AP).—A 19-year-old Negro was rescued by the town mayor and three other white men today from a mob which had the youth hogtied, a rope looped around his neck and which was threatening to lynch him.

The mayor, 48-year-old Hurt Vann, said he persuaded the crowd, growing "larger and rougher" by the minute, to release the Negro, Jimmy Harris, because "that is the best way—we ought to let the law take its course."

Vann said Harris had been seized by the mob after a white woman reported he broke into her home and attempted to rape her.

Vann said he rushed Harris to a truck and raced out of town. "I knew he wouldn't have a chance if he stayed there," he said.

Truman Pays Parliament Surprise Call

President Goes Unexpectedly To Unveiling of Portraits in Canada

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Ottawa, June 10.—President Truman's impulsiveness, sometimes criticized in Washington as "shooting from the hip," brought him acclaim late today in this capital of Canada.

Tossing aside protocol, Mr. Truman dropped in unexpectedly at a ceremony in the Parliament Building. Members of the House of Commons and of the Senate, surprised and delighted, abandoned dignity themselves and yelled "Hooray! Hooray!"

It all happened less than two hours after President Truman, coming up over the famous undefended border, had arrived in Ottawa to be greeted by a 21-gun salute and the friendly smiles of thousands.

The American Chief Executive, first ever to make a visit of state to Canada, was in Rideau Hall, home of the Governor General. The time was 5 p.m. According to the program so carefully worked out by American and Canadian protocol officers, there would be nothing for Mr. Truman to do until 8 p.m., when he would be guest of honor at a state dinner.

Viscount Alexander of Tunis, the Governor General and Mr. Truman's host, asked to be excused for a while.

He explained that he had to leave Rideau Hall to go to the Parliament Building for a ceremony marking Mackenzie King's twentieth anniversary as Prime Minister of Canada. A portrait of MacKenzie King was to be presented to the House of Commons and also one of Sir Robert Laird Borden, his predecessor.

President Truman listened and on an impulse—a gracious one, Canadians thought tonight—said something like this to Viscount Alexander:

"I'd like to go along. May I?"

The President and the governor general, using the same Canadian-made Buick that the King and Queen rode in back in 1939, traveled together to the Parliament Buildings.

The Canadian law makers, most of them wearing clawhammer coats and gates-ajar collars, were utterly astonished when Mr. Truman walked into Confederation Hall with Viscount Alexander.

J. H. King, Speaker of the Senate, did not quickly get over his confusion. One of his tasks was to lead Viscount Alexander over to the portrait of Sir Robert Laird Borden so that he could unveil it. Borden was a Victorian with white hair and a white guardsman's mustache. However, when the governor general pulled the cord, and the drapes fell away, the portrait turned out to be that of Mackenzie King, which was to have been unveiled next.

Mr. Truman joined in the laughter that followed.

Gaspard Fauteux, Speaker of the House, was so nervous that he could hardly read his speech. His accent was thick, too, and it was difficult to follow him. However, there was no mistaking his words when he turned toward President Truman and began to speak off the cuff. He told how "delighted"

Peron Arms Paraguay, Brazil Hears

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, June 10 (U.P.).—A tumultuous secret session of the Chamber of Deputies today heard charges that Argentine President Juan D. Peron is supplying arms to the Paraguayan government for the current civil war and carrying out "imperialistic policies" towards other neighbor countries.

The charges caused a sensation, coming on the eve of calling the Conference of American Foreign Ministers here and exactly three weeks after the meeting of Peron with Brazilian President Eurico Gaspar Dutra to seal the Good Neighbor policy between both countries.

Flores da Cunha, of Rio Grande do Sul, charged that Paraguayan President Higinio Morinigo concluded a secret pact with Peron shortly after the outbreak of the Paraguayan civil war in March, under which specified quantities of Argentine arms and munitions were to be delivered to Morinigo every two weeks.

Heated Debate

Da Cunha, one of the leaders of the powerful Democratic Union Party, was backed by Deputy Pereira Silva, of the government's Social Democratic Party, who pointed out that an Argentine military mission presently is training the Ecuadorian army. He made the

4 Russian Planes Covering Invasion, News Agency Says

Nanking (Wednesday), June 11 (AP).—Outer Mongolian troops with air support attacked the Sinkiang Province town of Peitashan Friday in a dispute with the Chinese over the release of eight Mongolian soldiers seized by a Chinese patrol in previous border clashes, authoritative sources said today.

Reliable sources said the Mongolian commander attacked Peitashan after the expiration of a 48-hour ultimatum in which the Sinkiang Chinese were warned that force would be used unless the soldiers were released promptly.

Supported by Planes

Information from Tihwa, Sinkiang capital, said the Chinese garrison commander had ordered the Mongolians freed prior to the attack but that his instructions had failed to reach Peitashan ahead of the assault.

The Government-sponsored Chinese Central News Agency said earlier that four Russian warplanes supported the Soviet-Dominated Mongolians. Central News described Soviet planes as "bombing and strafing troops and civilians" during a 200-mile penetration of northwestern Sinkiang.

Chinese correspondents had been filing exciting stories of the Sinkiang situation since Friday, but the Chinese Government suppressed them. Tonight it released the Agency's four-day old dispatch.

Nanking long has hesitated to circulate or permit publication of reports critical of the Russians, with whom it is negotiating to take over administration of the treaty ports, Dairen and Port Arthur in Manchuria.

A year ago, revolt flared in western Sinkiang, but details of the fighting were not learned.

The situation became so critical, however, that Chiang Kai-shek sped

Rail Lobby for Bulwinkle Bill Accused of Forming 'Fronts'

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Heated charges that the American Association of Railroads is operating a lobby that "smells to high heaven," for pushing through a bill exempting railroads from antitrust laws for rate-making purposes, were aired on the Senate floor yesterday.

Peppery Senator Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.) charged that the railroads have built a series of "front organizations" labelled with such names as taxpayers' leagues, education foundations, etc., to give the appearance of unbiased support for railroad monopolies.

In support of the Bulwinkle bill to exempt railroads from possible prosecution under the antitrust laws on rate-fixing charges, Senator Clyde M. Reed (R., Kans.) yesterday put into the record a list of 958 organizations which indorse it.

Senator Richard Russell (D., Ga.), an opponent, promptly claimed that the list was in itself proof of the operation of the most highly organized lobby in the Nation's history.

"Never in connection with a declaration of war or of peace by this Nation have we ever had such a 'spontaneous demonstration' by the people," Russell said sarcastically.

Russell told a reporter that only the Government of the United States itself could possibly or-

'Fighting Words' Shatter Senate Chamber Serenity

Four "fighting words" that never before had been echoed in the Senate of the United States popped out during the hot debate yesterday on the railroad bill.

Senator Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.) told startled colleagues that three railroad lobbyists had called him a name reflecting on his maternal ancestry (without smiling) and "consigned him to hell" and he in turn had told the lobbyists "You're crooked from top to bottom. I can't say any more or I'd cease to be a gentleman."

Tobey said that at lunch a Justice Department official complimented him on a speech he made against the bill and told him what the lobbyists had said about him. Tobey walked over to the trio and delivered his reply in person.

'Filibuster' Slows 'Voice' Bill in House

Information Funds Vital to Foreign Policy, Marshall Tells Senators

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Ranking members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee last night charged an isolationist "filibuster" against legislation salvaging the State Department's world-wide information and cultural programs.

A bill making it possible for the department to continue "Voice of America" broadcasts and education exchange activities failed to make any headway against a series of delaying maneuvers.

As the House bogged down in its second attempt to pass the bill, Secretary of State George C. Marshall appealed to the Senate Appropriations Committee to restore $55,267,388 in House-slashed State Department funds.

"Vital to Future Peace"

He warned that the Communist coup in Hungary and other European developments "emphasize the importance of not whittling down the State Department . . ."

"Conduct of our foreign relations is vital to the future peace and security of the United States," he told the Senate group. "The Department of State is the agency responsible for conducting our foreign relations."

"It should not be handicapped at this particular and critical time in meeting responsibilities of vast importance to this country—and to the world, for that matter."

Mundt Bill Hits Snag

Marshall termed "essential" the House-rejected $34,201,200 for information and cultural activities. Even while he spoke the Mundt bill, designed to bridge the gap by specifically authorizing the program, ran into its second House snag in five days.

Three quorum calls, while the House was considering the unre-

Secretary Marshall said yesterday that Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith thinks the "Voice of America" broadcasts give the Russians the truth in doses that are too big.

Before the Senate Appropriations Committee, Marshall said Smith, from his post in Moscow, said he "thought they (the broadcasts) were overdoing the truth."

"Particularly," Interrupted Senator Lodge (R., Mass.), "when they are not used to it."

Marshall said Smith placed "the greatest importance" on continuation of the cultural and information program.

He has advised, Marshall said, that the magazine America, which the State Department sends to Russia, is so widely sought after that single pages are sold in the black market.

Flier Who Crashed On Father's Cafe Called a Suicide

La Crosse, Wis., June 10 (U.P.).—A 22-year-old former Navy flier, killed when his light plane crashed into his father's roadside cafe Saturday, died in a suicide dive, Coroner George Reay ruled today.

The young pilot was Gordon Schultz. The plane set the one-story building on fire and destroyed it. His uncle, Harry Schultz, 53, who was sleeping in the building, suffered fatal burns and died at a hospital.

County authorities said Schultz made out a will just before he took off and mailed it to a friend, who turned it over to investigators. Reay would not release the contents of the will.

Sends Fact-Finding Mission

World Bank Moves to Help Increase Polish Coal Output

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

The World Bank has decided to examine the possibilities of helping to speed up Poland's coal production.

This new attack on Europe's urgent coal problem was disclosed yesterday in an announcement by the Bank that "a small fact-finding group" would leave for Poland tomorrow for an inquiry of about six weeks. The mission will go at the invitation of the Polish Government.

Its purpose is to get information in connection with Poland's application for a three-year reconstruction loan of 600 million dollars from the Bank. Poland is a member of the Bank, although Russia is not.

"The purpose of the visit," said the bank's statement, "is solely to obtain information of a general exploratory nature and carries no implication whatever as to what action the bank may hereafter take in regard to such a loan."

Significantly, in view of the present and potential importance of Polish coal to the rest of Europe, the bank has retained an American authority on coal mining to accompany its mission to Poland.

He is H. F. Hebley, an international coal expert and director of research for the Pittsburgh Consolidation Coal Co. It was assumed here yesterday that Hebley will inspect the Silesian mines and will give the bank his expert opinion on the possibilities of pushing coal production with the help of a World Bank loan.

The other members of the mission will be Elmer C. Burland, the Bank's chief loan officer; William C. Weik, chief of the eastern European division of its loan de-

Balkan Army Staffs Meet In Belgrade

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, June 10 (AP).—A Bulgarian military delegation arrived Saturday night for unexplained reasons. Yugoslav government "information" authorities disclosed the delegation's presence only today.

A Czechoslovak military mission will arrive tomorrow. A Romanian delegation headed by Premier Petru Groza is now in the capital.

(Marshal Tito, Communist chief of state in Yugoslavia, has advocated formation of a Balkan federation.)

Lieut. Gen. Zaharje Zaharijev, who was described as "here for the Soviet Union," was in the Bulgarian delegation, headed by Lieut. Gen. Ferdinand Kozovski, assistant minister of the army.

A government spokesman said it was assumed the visit was only one of friendship.

Ramadier Says He May Draft Rail Strikers

Premier of France Used Power to End Bakers' Walkout

Paris, June 10 (U.P.).—Premier Paul Ramadier told the National Assembly tonight that he would use emergency powers to mobilize 500,000 striking railroad workers into the armed services if they refused to return to their jobs.

Late tonight, the powerful, Communist-dominated General Labor Confederation (CGT) threw its weight behind the strikers.

CGT leaders, at a meeting with Ramadier, backed up railroad union officials who refused to order their men back to work before the government agreed to wage increases.

In his Assembly speech, Ramadier appealed for an end to the five-day walkout which has crippled transportation throughout France and warned that the government "will act with all the means which the law places at our disposal."

The law to which he referred gives the government the power to mobilize any citizen. It was enacted in 1938 and is scheduled to expire July 1. Ramadier used it to end the recent strike of Paris bakers' hands.

Ramadier condemned union leaders who flatly refused to request strikers to return to work. He stood pat on his decision not to negotiate with leaders of the railroadmen's federation until work was resumed.

He told the Assembly he had sent a letter to heads of the General Labor Confederation warning that the national economy and stability of the franc were being endangered. Ramadier did not ask for a vote of confidence, as some deputies predicted he would.

A report from Algiers said North African railway men voted to walk out for 24 hours beginning at midnight in sympathy with the metropolitan workers.

Food Supply Normal

The food supply in Paris and other metropolitan centers remained normal because the railroadmen kept food trains moving.

The government continued its emergency transportation service using buses, trucks and planes.

State Dept. Replies

By Wilbur Mackey
Post Reporter

A charge in Hungary of secret commitments to ousted Premier Ferenc Nagy by former Undersecretary of State Dean Acheson was an "obvious Communist propaganda maneuver," a State Department spokesman said last night.

The department released the texts of an exchange of letters between Acheson and Nagy, whom the Russians accuse of a plot to overthrow the democracy.

The first word of the two letters came from Joseph Revai, Communist member of Parliament, writing in the Communist newspaper Szabadsag.

His was a half-told tale.

Cites Acheson Letter

He declared that Acheson "promised support" after Nagy, in a letter dated January 10, sought the application of the "Truman doctrine" to Hungary, the Associated Press reported from Budapest.

This was two months before the so-called Truman doctrine was born. Furthermore, the only time the word "support" appeared in Acheson's letter was when he said peace would require "our steadfast support of the ideals and practices of free men."

Nagy's lone use of the word came when he said that "the Hungarian people have had occasion to enjoy the results of your understanding and support" following the United States' return of that Nation's gold reserve from Germany.

Pointing out that support had been given to the legal and freely-elected government, the department reissued old press releases.

Russia Declined Offer

Beside the gold announcement on August 8, 1946, these showed (in July, 1946) that the United States proposed the big powers cooperate in helping Hungary, but that Russia declined; (February 15) that this country had extended 30 million dollars in credits; and so on, in a similar vein.

Nagy's letter was delivered by his son Ferenc Nagy, jr., when he came to Washington to take a post with the legation here. Nagy himself is now in Bern, Switzerland, where he told the United Press yesterday:

"I am exceedingly pleased that the world does not give any credence to the charges against me and my (Smallholders) party, which were forcibly drawn from Bela Kovacs, (former secretary

Strike Averted At Briggs Plants Making Car Bodies

Detroit, June 10 (AP).—A strike of 20,000 workers in plants of the Briggs Manufacturing Co. was averted tonight, saving the automobile industry from serious production loss.

The company and the CIO United Auto Workers, who had called a walkout for 10 a. m. tomorrow, reached an agreement assuring continued production of car bodies to the Packard and Chrysler factories.

A Briggs strike ultimately would have forced Packard and Chrysler to quit making passenger cars, idling at least another 30,000 men.

Small Power Fear Of U.N. Police Eased

Britain, China Back U. S.; Gromyko Gives Atom Talk Today

By Francis W. Carpenter

Lake Success, June 10 (AP).—Britain and China, two of the Big Five in the United Nations, attempted today to calm the fears of small countries on the use of a proposed world police force but disagreed on how it could be employed.

Sir Alexander Cadogan, Britain, and Dr. C. L. Hsia, China, addressing the Security Council, generally lined up with the United States on the major issues involved in building a global police force.

As the Council went through another round of talk on police units which it would control, atomic delegations prepared for a statement tomorrow forenoon by Andrei A. Gromyko, Soviet delegate, before the U. N. Atomic Energy Commission.

Gromyko Bows on Minor Points

Gromyko, who bowed to the commission majority today on minor points, requested the meeting for the purpose of making important proposals on the control of atomic energy. He kept his own counsel on his speech, however.

The atomic commission has been deadlocked for a year by disagreement between the United States and Russia.

Joao Carlos Muniz, Brazil, led off debate on a world police force with a statement that because of the veto right of the five great powers in the Council such a force could be used only "in case of an aggression by a small power." He thus joined Belgium in pointing out that the military power of the U. N. could be stalled by a veto, even to the extent of a nation vetoing action against itself, and could be directed only against a little nation.

Cadogan replied:

"If any one of the permanent members, guilty of a breach of the peace or of an act of aggression, were to call a halt to the United Nations force, the remainder of the United Nations would be entitled under this article (Article 51 of the Charter, which provides for self-defense in the event of aggression) to take action against it . . ."

Dr. Hsia said the Charter does not even envisage the possibility of one of the great powers committing aggression. He said the concept of unanimity of the big powers remained the basis of the United Nations and if unanimity were destroyed, the entire structure of the United Nations would fall."

Other United Nations developments included:

1. Mark F. Ethridge, publisher of the Louisville Courier-Journal and United States member of the U. N. Balkans Commission, told a news conference he hoped a "new deal type of government" could be established in Greece. The security council soon will begin debate on the Balkans commission's report

Declaring "I am full of compromises today," Gromyko in effect withdrew the fifth in a series of 12 Soviet amendments to the Atomic Commission's December report. He said he would accept the commission's stand for an international system of control and inspection instead of pressing the Soviet version calling for a system of international control alone. He has agreed before to inspection but has not defined what Russia understands by the term inspection.

The Russian delegate also said he would agree to the commission's wording for this system to be defined by a treaty instead of standing on "convention" as he once suggested.

Irgun Frees Two British Policemen

Jerusalem, June 10 (U.P.).—Two British policemen kidnaped by Irgun Zvai Leumi extremists last night were released at noon today, apparently because the Irgunists were fearful of the powerful underground army Haganah which had joined the British in the rescue hunt.

The two men, Sergt. E. P. Hackett and Constable P. C. Ward, walked out of their place of detention and into the arms of a British patrol at 12:15 p. m. in the Givat Shaul suburb of Tel Aviv.

They still were wearing the bathing trunks in which they were abducted from the Ramat Gan suburb of Tel Aviv at dusk last night at a swimming pool.

One Is Identified

British police and army troops immediately searched the suburbs where the men were found, making arrests. One youthful Oriental Jew captured in the search was identified by both policemen as one of their abductors.

Both men were unharmed. They said four masked men guarded their movements until noon today, when the one then on guard said he was going out to phone. The policemen walked out after he left them alone.

They said their kidnapers gave them slippers, fed them American cheese and sausages, and gave them American cigarettes.

The kidnapers showed the officers a rope and told them they were being held as hostages for five extremists now on trial for participating in the Acre prison attack last month.

"This will end your lives if even one of our comrades loses his life in the military court of Jerusalem," they told the policemen.

Verdicts against the five extremists on trial are expected to be announced tomorrow.

"Letter Bombers" Seized

London, June 10 (U.P.).—British authorities today considered the possibility of bringing attempted murder charges against a man and a woman captured yesterday at the Belgian border with 10 letter-bombs in their possession of the type recently mailed to prominent British government officials.

Berserk Gorilla Mauls Zoo Keeper

Philadelphia, June 10 (U.P.).—The city zoo's 400-pound gorilla, Bamboo, went on a rampage today for the second time in six weeks and seriously mauled a keeper, Samuel Gunata, 64.

Gunata's scalp was nearly torn off and he suffered fractures of both arms. The gorilla released his grip only when other attendants drove him away with a stream of water.

Reported Mongolian Invasion

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

REDS GIVE AIR COVER—Mongols and Sinkiang defense troops were reportedly locked in "bitter fighting" 200 miles northeast of Tihwa (underlined). one of his top generals, Chang Chih-Chung, to Sinkiang as governor and sent in some troops.

There were numerous unofficial charges that outer Mongolians and Chinese Communists, with Russian assistance, inspired and supported the revolt, but the government never confirmed them.

The Central News Agency dispatch read:

"According to reports received by military authorities here (Tihwa) from Commissioner Usman of Ashan district and our garrison forces at Peiteshwan, on the afternoon of June 5 (Thursday) one outer Mongolian battalion, accompanied by several military lorries carrying ammunition, attacked our garrison forces at Peiteshwan, 117 miles northeast of Ohitan.

"Four planes with Soviet emblems covered the advance, bombing and strafing and inflicting casualties among our troops and civilians.

"More recent reports indicated these outer Mongolian units have penetrated to a depth of 200 miles inside our boundary. They are now being resisted."

Unofficial military spokesmen said that because of Sinkiang's isolation it appeared improbable the government could send sufficient defense forces to meet the attack.

ards Act placed the division in the Labor Department, but was silent on the Secretary's control.

2. Authorizes the Secretary of Labor to coordinate administration of acts regulating wages and hours on Federal public works, to remedy the present "uneven" enforcement.

Democrats generally supported the shifts, but Republicans balked at making USES a permanent adjunct of the Labor Department.

Originally established under the Labor Department, USES later was shifted to the Federal Security Agency under a 1938 regrouping of agencies. During the war it was transferred to the War Manpower Commission by executive order. When the WMC folded, it was returned to the Labor Department, where the President proposes to keep it. State employment agencies, backed up by Republican House members, want it back in the FSA.

In voting to reject Reorganization Plan No. 3, grouping most housing agencies and functions in a single Housing and Home Finance Agency, House Expenditures Committee Republicans argued it would make permanent agencies out of some temporary Government units concerned with housing. They opposed, too, grouping of leading and operating agencies under one head.

Said the President, however:

"Whatever may be the permanent housing functions of the Government, whether they be confined to the existing programs or supplemented as Congress may determine, they are inevitably interrelated.

"They require coordination and supervision so that each will render its full contribution without conflict with the performance of other housing functions."

Chinese Reds On Rampage In Manchuria

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Mukden, Manchuria, June 9 (Delayed).—For the last month, Chinese Communist armies have been on a rampage in the industrial area of southern Manchuria, which throughout the preceding year had been a government stronghold closed to them.

Their successes have caused speculation that Changchun and Mukden, the government's two main cities in Manchuria, might fall to them soon. Changchun, the capital, has been cut off for more than two weeks and Mukden is now surrounded on the north, east and southeast by a Communist line which crosses most of the railways some 40 miles from the city.

Mukden itself is panicky. There is a curfew at 8:30 p. m. (before it is even dark). In the morning, thousands of impressed laborers—including small boys and feeble old men—can be seen with shovels in hand, heading for the city's outskirts, where they are being forced to dig trenches and throw up earthworks. All who can are leaving the city.

Most experienced observers, however, seem to think there is not much immediate danger to either Mukden or Changchun.

The most reasonable estimate seems to be that the present Communist offensive—unquestionably a great success—will end by accomplishing not the fall of either big city, but a further advance toward the goals which the Communists are aiming at all over China in this stage of the war. These are mainly the whittling down of government forces, destruction of communications and industrial plants in government territory and the spreading of Communist influence throughout the countryside.

There are plenty of signs that these advances will effect the eventual fall of Mukden and Changchun, and perhaps of all Manchuria, but not that this will happen immediately.

Jap Surgeon Charged With Inhumanities

Guam, June 10 (AP).—A nervous little Japanese fleet surgeon charged with using American prisoners for inhuman medical experiments went on trial before a military commission today with 18 subordinates accused of spearing, strangling and beheading ten of their captives.

Frail, middle-aged Capt Hiroshi Iwanami, who allegedly ordered prisoners injected with virulent bacteria on the sea bastion of Truk, squirmed and licked his lips as the charges were read.

After this preliminary was completed, the commission recessed until June 24 to give Japanese defense counsel from Tokyo time to prepare their case.

The U. S. Navy, which is conducting the trial, charges that bacterial injections killed four American prisoners. Experiments with tourniquets took the lives of two men, the charges state, and two who survived were injected with morphine. When that did not kill them, they were strangled, the prosecution asserts.

Bodies Decapitated

Two other Americans allegedly were strung up like football dummies on Iwanami's orders. One of them was stabbed with bamboo spears to test the value of spears as weapons while the other was bayoneted

The Navy contends bodies were decapitated and the heads boiled and then sent to Japan for study. A persistent search in Japan has failed to locate the heads. The corpses, buried on Truk, reportedly were dug up at the end of the war and hurled into the sea.

The prosecution charged that Iwanami assisted a now dead surgeon to experiment with shock by applying tourniquets to the arms and legs of four American prisoners for as long as 10 hours. Japanese doctors could not understand why their own sailors died after long hours in tourniquets, apparently unaware that they must be loosened periodically.

After two Americans died, the remaining two were tied to a tree and subjected to dynamite blasts for further shock. When this, and injections of morphine, failed to kill them, they were strangled.

Iwanami was quoted as saying he wanted to determine whether skull structure was the reason for "the superiority of the white race." He contended that Japan had isolated itself too greatly and that Japanese possibly should intermarry with whites.

The court president is Rear Admiral Arthur G. Robinson, 1501 33d st. nw., Washington, D. C.

King, Queen Greet 5000 at Garden Party

London, June 10 (AP).—Five thousand guests, including more than 100 Americans, were entertained today by King George VI and Queen Elizabeth at a Buckingham Palace garden party—the post-war equivalent of formal presentation in court.

The Americans, most of whom were members of the U. S. Embassy staff, lined up two by two and were introduced to the King and Queen by U. S. Ambassador Lewis W. Douglas, who wore the customary top hat, frock coat and striped trousers.

The affair was the second and final presentation party of the year.

As at last month's garden party, most of the men wore gray toppers and all that goes with them, while the women let their fancy roam and wore dresses that stopped anywhere from the ankle to two inches above the knee.

African Band Plays

Most of the American women followed the example of Mrs. Douglas and her daughter, Sharman, and wore frocks which extended slightly below the knee. Mrs. Douglas' dress was blue, and her hat was of whitish straw with a blue pompom. Miss Douglas was clad in a figured chartreuse dress, and wore a straw hat with a veil down the back.

The royal family entertained at a silver-posted tea tent. Alongside was the diplomatic tea tent, where the Americans found their way after being presented. Across the way was an elongated pavilion where everyone else had tea or iced drinks and listened to band music.

For the first time at a royal garden party, one of the bands was composed of Negro musicians—they from Africa's Gold Coast.

King and Queen Crowded

Many of the Americans were startled at the way some of Britain's titled personages jockeyed for position to see the royal family.

It was hard sometimes for the King and Queen to find elbow room enough to shake hands with the guests.

The dignified bearing of Miss Douglas and another young presentee, Letitia (Tish) Baldridge of Washington and Omaha, Nebr., contrasted "oddly but not unpleasingly," as a British observer put it, with their zestful cheerleading at a baseball and cricket match yesterday at Cambridge.

ganize such a lobby reaching into every State and town and hamlet to garner support for a measure before Congress.

"No other interest in the United States is big enough," Russell said.

The list of supporters contains 48 State authorities; 20 carrier organizations; 85 shippers' traffic and transportation organizations; 145 agricultural and livestock organizations; 108 business organizations; 552 chambers of commerce, civic and other organizations.

The list includes organizations like this: Titusville, Pa., Chamber of Commerce; Wasau, Wis., Chamber of Commerce; White Bear, Minn., Association; Palouse, Wash., Chamber of Commerce; Oregon State Pharmaceutical Association; Peoria Board of Trade; Sumner, Wash., Rhubarb Growers Association; Washington Nut Growers Cooperative.

"Actually when you study this list, it is fairly simple to see how this huge pressure lobby is operating," Russell told The Washington Post.

"The Association of American Railroads sets its policy, and railroads are notified. In turn, word goes out to all attorneys, station agents and so forth all over the country.

"The railroads have selected as their attorneys in every State and city in the United States lawyers who are popular and hold a position of some leadership in the community.

Cites Unwitting Shippers

"On a bill like this it is the easiest thing in the world for a popular lawyer or a popular station agent to have some organization or group with which he is connected pass a resolution favoring the legislation.

"Now for example, supporters of this bill claim the measure has the unanimous support of shippers' organizations. Well, some shippers in my own state wrote me in support of the measure.

"I wrote back that I certainly would not vote for the measure which would freeze the discriminatory freight rates in the South and the West and make it impossible for us ever to change them

"Those shippers wrote me back that they had not really known much about the legislation, but that so and so, a popular railroad man, and a friend of theirs, had asked them to write me. They said they hoped I would not vote for the bill."

Defends Arrest

Civil War Averted, Says Bulgar

London, June 10 (U.P.).—Bulgaria's Communist Premier Georgi Dimitrov is determined to keep Bulgaria from becoming "a jumping-off point for hostile actions against our emancipators, the Russian people," as well as against other "Slav and non-Slav democratic nations."

He alleged in an interview broadcast today by the Moscow radio that "certain reactionary circles" were hostile to Bulgaria and that Nicola Petkov, opposition leader now under arrest, received foreign aid in an alleged plot against the government.

Dimitrov vigorously defended his arrest of Petkov and said he was guarding against civil war.

"In this affair no foreign interference will save either Petkov or anybody else," he said. Denying that he intends to suppress opposition parties, he added: "The opposition will continue to exist. But it must be a loyal opposition which does not engage in preparing a coup against the state authority, does not hinder the organization of food supplies and does not sabotage the state plan for a national economy."

Promised Support To Former Premier, Hungarian Says

By Jack Guinn

Budapest, June 10 (AP).—Premier Lajos Dinnyes, personally chosen for his position by Soviet Lieut. Gen. V. P. Sviridov, announced today that "antidemocratic" elements would be purged from the Hungarian army, 80 per cent of whose officers, he said, have "fled to the west."

"First of all," he declared in a 75-minute address to the National Assembly, Hungary wished to maintain friendship with "the great Soviet Union."

He asserted various parties in his government had agreed in principle to nationalization of Hungarian banks, and to nationalization of the country's bauxite mines and aluminum.

Dinnyes' speech was preceded by a strange declaration from a member of the Small Landholders Party which has been reduced to impotence by the coup in which Premier Nagy was obliged by Communists to resign.

This Small Landholder, Mihaly Guba, declared the alleged plot in which the Russians charge Nagy was implicated, was directed "against our good liberating friend, the Soviet Union."

This is the plot which the Russians have charged was aimed at overthrowing "Hungarian democracy."

Guba said the Small Landholders as a body "despises and wishes to prosecute the conspirators and their friends regardless of position and rank." Nagy, he added, and Bela Varga, fugitive former speaker of the Assembly, were "criminal partners" in the plot.

Dinnyes, who also is War Minister, told the Assembly in his maiden speech, that the Hungarian army, which the Soviet Union reportedly has offered to train and equip, would be increased by 3000 men to 18,000 in the next budget year. Hungary is allowed 65,000 by the peace treaty.

Wants U. S. Friendship

He said his government wanted good relations with the United States and other nations, as well as Russia.

Interesting to Americans was his statement that the deportation of Swabians (Hungarians of German blood) may be attempted into zones of Germany other than the American.

The Americans at one time refused to receive Swabians from Hungary on the grounds of "inhuman treatment" en route that caused several to die.

An American informant said it was unlikely a United States reply would be sent to Russian authorities who have turned down a request for copies of the documents containing the charges against Nagy, now in exile in Switzerland. The matter may be taken up, however, at the next meeting of the Allied Control Council, either Friday or next Monday, the informant said.

Diplomats Implicated

Zurich, Switzerland, June 10 (U.P.).—Anton Dan, Social Democrat minister of transport in the Hungarian cabinet, asserted today Hungarian diplomats abroad used a secret code to engage in the alleged conspiracy which caused the ousting of Premier Ferenc Nagy.

He said several diplomats were implicated and added that the conspirators intended to overthrow the Republican regime as soon as foreign occupation troops were withdrawn.

Irregulars Set On Frontiers, Greek Says

By Seymour Friedin

Athens, June 10.—Foreign Minister Constantin Tsaldaris said tonight that "several thousand irregulars" are poised on all of Greece's northern frontiers, ready for invasion. The situation in the north, he said, is "more serious than ever."

Tsaldaris said that with the irregulars, whom he described as "Greek Communists and so-called Greek refugees," is the "menace of the International Brigade."

Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Albania, he told correspondents, "may invade with the International Brigade and with their own troops in order to wage an organized war." He said the "Slavs are trying to camouflage their game."

Tsaldaris said he had received this information from various quarters, including "captured bandits."

At the same time Premier Demetrios Maximos, prompted by the smoldering resentment within government blocs over the method of restoring internal order, summoned Gen. Napoleon Zarvas, minister of public order, from an inspection tour of northern Greece to a conference in Athens.

The Premier's summons to General Zervas followed a statement signed by 15 members of the Populist (Royalist) Party, the parliamentary majority, which said these members will withdraw their confidence from the government if its operations in the Peloponnesus are not conducted in a different and more successful fashion.

Meanwhile, the American Military Mission conferred today with the British Military Mission and the Greek general staff. Discussion among the officers, it was understood, concerned integration of the activities of each unit. The American Missions job, it was emphasized, is not concerned with tactical problems, but with the equipment and needs of the Greek army.

Petersen Returns From Reich Today

By The Associated Press

Assistant Secretary of War Howard C. Petersen is expected to recommend soon ways to hasten the peaceful economic rehabilitation of Germany based on his personal survey of the British-American occupation zone.

Petersen returns today from Germany where he was during the peak of the recent food crisis that resulted in rumblings of riot. While there he discussed the problem with American military officials and local government authorities.

The Assistant Secretary will hold a news conference Friday.

general of the party, now a Russian prisoner).

"One hears daily of new arrests in Budapest and daily new confessions are being squeezed out of arrested persons.

"If I were in Budapest the world probably would hear the same accusations voiced by me.

"This method of 'fighting' doubtless belongs to the policy of communistic expansion, the general attack of which has commenced."

The release of the letters is just a part of Government's action. In the next day or so, a strong American note will be sent to the Russians placing much of the responsibility of the Communist coup in Hungary on them. It has been reported that this country will threaten to take the case to the United Nations.

First Soviet Comment

In the first Soviet comment on the Hungarian government charge, the United States was accused today of "unjustified repressive acts" in halting credits to Hungary "without even receiving any information on the subject."

Pravda, Communist Party organ, bitterly attacked American and British journalists as "venal scribblers" and "professional slanderers," who are "defaming Hungarian democracy" when they see "an attempt of the Hungarian Communist Party to seize power in the country."

Pravda also declared that "a group of Senators headed by (Arthur) Vandenberg (R., Mich.)" is contemplating "exploiting the events in Hungary to disrupt the United Nations" by threatening to bring up the case, the Chicago Sun Foreign Service reported.

Senator Eastland (D., Miss.), Pravda added, "goes so far as to state that in event of the Soviet Union leaving the U. N., the organization might be turned into a "military organization."

Texts of Letters

Following are the texts of the two letters:

From Nagy, Dated January 10:

"My son, Ferenc Nagy, jr., a junior member of the foreign service, has been assigned to the Hungarian Legation in Washington and is now departing to take up his duties and at the same time to study at a university if that is practicable.

"I am availing myself to this opportunity, Mr. Secretary, to send you a letter, mindful of our unforgettable visit to Washington and of your kind and understanding hospitality. Since then the Hungarian people have had occasion to enjoy the results of your understanding and support.

"The National Bank's gold reserve, with which we created a solid basis for the stabilization, is at home and from time to time displaced Hungarian property arrives to strengthen Hungarian economic life which is still struggling with many obstacles.

"Since then the Paris peace conference has been concluded and determined the basic principles of the peace treaty to be concluded withHungary. The peace treaty will be burdensome on us but I place my trust in the Hungarian people's desire to live and in their husbandry, and I believe that they will be able to bear the burdens which the peace treaties will impose on us. All our efforts are devoted to the end that as soon as possible Hungary might become the home of a satisfied, free people and that it might contribute to the progress of mankind.

"I beg you, Mr. Secretary, not to permit the good will you feel toward us and have given evidence of to be diminished and to continue to honor with your esteem these little peoples whose prime minister, overburdened with many cares, greets you with a grateful heart and with highest esteem."

Acheson's Reply

Acheson's reply, dated March 3, nine days before the Truman plan to aid Greece and Turkey was announced:

"I have received your kind message of January 10, 1947, which you sent to me through your son, Ferenc Nagy, jr., now a member of the staff of the Hungarian Legation in Washington. It is a sincere pleasure to have this greeting from you.

"In the months which have passed since your visit to the United States in June, 1946, I have continued to follow events in Hungary with interest. I have noted with warm sympathy the will which the Hungarian people have shown to develop free and democratic institutions and their self-denying efforts to rehabilitate their national economy on a stable basis. These endeavors, I feel, have been well-guided by your leadership and that of President Tildy, and I have no doubt that in this duty you, in turn, have drawn strength and inspiration from the perseverance of your people.

"I can assure you that we here are giving close attention to the important problems affecting Hungary and, as you know, we are currently exploring in cooperation with the Hungarian Minister in Washington various possible means of extending further material assistance to your country.

"In this period following upon the long and bitter years of war, we have had to deal with many difficult problems—problems which bear vitally on the welfare, happiness and freedom of the peoples of the world. It is unfortunately true that, in some instances, the solutions which have been adopted in connection with the peace settlements as the only ones possible of agreement are not entirely satisfactory.

"Nevertheless, a beginning, however imperfect, has been made, and I am sure you will agree with me that we must now seek to consolidate the peace and to move ahead from this point along the paths of cooperation and freedom. I believe that progress and enduring peace for mankind will require not only our patience and understanding but also our steadfast support of the ideals and practices of free men.

"The good will which the American people feel for the people of Hungary will not be diminished. It will, I am confident, continue to flourish, not alone because of the past friendship of our peoples but also because it will find new nurture in the common undertakings of peace upon which we are now engaged."

Arms Program Is Supported By Patterson

Atlantic City, N. J., June 10 (AP).—Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson declared today the Administration's program of supplying arms to Latin American countries would not give those nations more military equipment than they now have because they would be required to turn in their present military equipment.

Here to address the American Medical Association, Patterson declared the War Department supported the Latin American arms program as part of "the unification of the western hemisphere under the Chapultepec agreement."

"The program contemplates the turning in by South American countries of their present military equipment," he said. "Our arms will be improved weapons over the ones they now have."

"They will not have more arms as a result of the program than they have," he declared.

Asked whether the arms program might increase the amount of arms available for revolutionary groups in Latin American countries, Patterson said that when groups planned revolutions "one way or another they will get their arms." He added there always has been a "vacuum" in gun running.

general charge that Brazil's frontiers were virtually abandoned.

Communist Deputy Mauricio Grabois attempted to refute the charges against Peron, precipitating a heated debate which soon degenerated into a general tumult.

Majority Leader Cirilo Junior said he had been "deeply impressed" by the expose and that he would inform President Dutra of the charges. He was sure, he said, that the President would take adequate measures to protect Brazilian interests.

According to the figures supplied by Da Cunha, the first shipment of Argentine arms for Morinigo consists of "1000 infantry rifles; 1000 hand grenades; 1000 motar shells; five million rifle bullets; five million machine-gun bullets; 1000 shells for 75 m.m. guns; 1000 shells for 105 m.m. guns, plus other war material and a flour shipment."

Also Supplied Gasoline

Argentina also furnished Morinigo 1800 cubic meters of gasoline, Da Cunha said.

He told the newspaper Diario Da Noite that the purpose of his expose was to try and forestall "an unprovoked and illegal surprise attack on our country in the not far distant future."

In a chamber speech Friday, Da Cunha said that Peron was now "trying to sink his claws into small, heroic Paraguay, after having dropped his anchor in Peru, seeking to hitch Chile to his chariot by economic pressure and having concluded a commercial treaty with Bolivia."

Labor Government Defeated in Lords

London, June 10 (U.P.).—The Labor Government suffered three defeats in the overwhelmingly Conservative House of Lords today during debate on the bill for nationalization of transport.

First the Lords approved, 87 to 21, and amendment forbidding the transport minister to direct the proposed transport commission to take over any enterprise which could not pay its own way.

Next the Lords approved, 76 to 20, and amendment providing that executives in nationalized transport be appointed by the commission and not by the transport minister. Last, the Lords, 71 to 20, approved an amendment to remove docks from the administration of executives acting as agents of the commission.

'Filibuster' Slows 'Voice' Bill, House Supporters Charge

lated Reorganization Plan No. 2, delayed calling up the bill until late afternoon. A motion to strike out the enacting clause, rejected at a similar session last Friday, was reoffered by Representative Noah Mason (R., Ill.). The motion, aimed at killing the bill, was rejected, 119 to 92. But when the House quit at 5:35 p. m. the bill was no nearer passage. The "privileged" Government corporation appropriation bill was slated for action ahead of it today. Debate on the Mundt bill will be resumed tomorrow only if the corporate funds bill is passed by that time.

The "filibuster" charges followed a day's end floor huddle of ranking members of the Foreign Affairs Committee.

Representative Karl E. Mundt (R., S. Dak.), floor managing the measure, attributed the delays to "hard core" isolationists representing a minority of the House.

Said Mundt, himself a prewar isolationist: "There was something to be said for isolation against war, but who can justify isolation against peace."

Representative Frances P. Bolton (R., Ohio) bluntly charged quorum calls and other delaying moves were designed to hold up House passage "until it's too late for the Senate to act."

"They did just that last year," said Mrs. Bolton. "And they say the House can't filibuster!"

Out of the Foreign Affairs strategy huddle came a plan to accept at least one compromise amendment by Representative Everett M. Dirksen (R., Ill.). This would set up a bipartisan board, appointed by the President and subject to Senate confirmation, to supervise the world-wide information program.

Leading the opposition fight were Representatives Mason, Clare E. Hoffman (R., Mich.), William C. Cole (R., Mo.), Hubert S. Ellis (R., W. Va.), George H. Bender (R., Ohio) and Harold Knutson (R., Minn.).

Knutson called the bill a departure from "fundamental Americanism" and shouted:

"Little did I expect to live to see the day that a Republican Congress would grab the New Deal ball and run away with it."

Without congressional approval, the "Voice of America" broadcasts, foreign information and educational exchange programs would end July 1.

Marshall meanwhile asked the Senate Committee to restore the entire $34,201,200 budgeted for the programs, together with $21,066,288 additional the House clipped from State Department funds.

"The fighting is ended—but the peace has not been achieved," Marshall told the Senators. "The Army and Navy have been demobilized to a large extent, but the State Department, in effect, is forced to deploy its efforts and personnel on a global front, with almost every conceivable complexity to be met."

student's beating charges and are based on an alleged disturbance credited to the two policemen in an M st restaurant shortly before Fitzpatrick was arrested.

Edward B. Williams, Fitzpatrick's attorney, scored yesterday's court decision. "If the boy is not guilty of intoxication, it follows he was illegally arrested for intoxication. Therefore the disorderly conduct charges were illogical since he was merely protesting a false arrest."

Stewart testified Fitzpatrick was "weaving" when he arrested him in the Hoya Inn May 29 and later, after getting him into the scout car, became "abusive." The second policemen, Pvt. J. Daly, who was with Stewart, corroborated his statements. He is not charged.

A long line of witness testified for Fitzpatrick, including the Rev. William A. Ryan, assistant prefect of discipline, and the Rev. Nicholas A. Kunkel, prefect of discipline at Georgetown University.

As a result of the June 4 incident, Stewart and Garrett are scheduled to face a police trial board at 10 a.m. Friday, but have the right to file for a continuance before that time.

Meanwhile, charges against a third policeman who has been suspended pending investigation of an incident involving another Georgetown University student have been prepared but not served.

The policeman is Pvt. L. E Gatlin, charged with being under the influence of alcohol so as to be unfit for duty.

Disorderly conduct charges against the student, Robert McCole, 22, who was arrested by Gatlin, have been dismissed.

Sparrows Point Rail Spur Will Cost $1,000,000

Baltimore, June 10 (AP).—The Pennsylvania Railroad announced plans today for construction of a 7-mile track to the Sparrows Point section "as one of the most important factors in industrial expansion of the Baltimore area."

Cost to the railroad for the "Patapsco Neck industrial track" was estimated at more than one million dollars.

The spur will leave the main line at the Bay View yards in Baltimore and aid industrial development of hundreds of acres of land in the Back River territory east of North Point rd.

Bethlehem Steel Co. operates steel mills, shipbuilding yards and other industries in the area.

The Pennsylvania built the Bay View yards during World War II at a cost of more than $3,500,000.

Ocean Stream Shift Kill 15 Million Pelicans

Lima, Peru, June 10 (U.P.).—At least 15 million pelicans and other marine birds were estimated today to have died because of the recent southward shifting of ocean currents near the Peruvian coast.

Llosa Belaunde, general manager of the company administering Peruvian guano deposits, said the birds had tried to follow the shifting currents towards the coast of Northen Chile and died of cold and starvation.

Eccles Asks Buying Curbs

By The Associated Press

Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the board of the Federal Reserve System, asked Congress yesterday to give the board peacetime authority to regulate installment buying.

Testifying before the House Banking Committee, he said the board could use it to "reduce economic instability" and help preserve "our private enterprise system." The committee has before it a bill to give the board this authority.

Eccles, in fact said the restrictions on installment buying might end this summer unless Congress gave the board peacetime authority to continue the controls. He said that President Truman "has written a letter indicating that he will follow the board's recommendation" to cancel the wartime executive order under which controls are wielded unless Congress makes regulatory powers permanent.

Considerable opposition to the extension legislation has arisen.

The board now regulates credit buying under wartime powers which will expire when the war is officially declared over. One of its regulations, for instance, requires a down payment of at least one-third when an automobile is bought on the installment plan.

Eccles said that the regulations "help to dampen the demand and thus reduce the upward pressure on prices" in the present time of short supply of many goods. Then arguing that the "need for regulation is not merely a temporary one," he said:

"Even when goods become available in larger quantities, however, reasonable restraints on consumer installment credit would serve a useful public purpose, because they would tend to induce sellers to reach more customers by reducing prices instead of by resorting to a competitive relaxation of installment credit terms while still maintaining high prices.

Eccles earlier replied to an attack by the American Bankers Association on a pending measure to continue the Federal Reserve Bank's authority to guarantee, in part, loans by private banks to small businesses.

He said that Earl R. Muir of Louisville, Ky., a member of the association's small business credit commission, had attempted "to stir up animosities" by contending the measure "would tend to destroy the dual banking system."

"This," he said, "is a familiar red herring. It is repeatedly dragged out by the opponents of the Federal Reserve System, and it is utterly false.

Labor Warned Of Possible Tougher Bill

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

In the face of a congressional threat of "even tougher" labor legislation, CIO President Philip Murray yesterday urged Mr. Truman to veto the Taft-Hartley bill.

Hartley

Murray wrote the President that the bill "is the keystone in a program to legislate a new depression." In a 13,000-word accompanying statement, giving a detailed analysis of the technical aspects of the bill, Murray sought to document his contention that it is "a repressive measure of unprecedented proportions."

The bill was sent to the White House Monday. Mr. Truman has until June 19 to decide whether or not to veto it. Its proponents are confident of overriding a veto.

The warning of even more severe legislation came from Chairman Hartley (R., N. J.) of the House Labor Committee. He threatened it as a counter measure to a general strike by organized labor against the present bill. He said he had "mounting evidence" that plans for such a strike were "in the minds of labor leaders."

900 Strike Notices

During the past 30 days, he said, more than 900 strike notices have been filed with the Labor Department, "far above the normal number for that period.

"The only reason that a large number of unions would want to file strike notices for this period is to be ready to strike in June when the labor bill becomes law," he declared.

Many members of Congress were dissatisfied with the Republican labor bill because the curbs were not sufficiently stringent, he said. "The stronger House bill was much more popular in the lower chamber," he said.

"If the labor leaders try to demonstrate their contempt for Congress by pulling a general strike, they will be met with an even tougher bill. Congress will be perfectly willing to stay in session this summer if it is necessary."

Compared With Case Bill

In the analysis of the Taft-Hartley bill which he sent the President, Murray included a comparison between it and the Case bill which Mr. Truman vetoed last year. Murray sought to demonstrate that the pending measure was far more repressive than last year's legislation.

Murray went on to allege that in a recent statement, Senator Taft (R., Ohio) admitted that "the purpose of the Case bill . . . was to curb labor in order to arm employers with the power to degrade living standards.

"Senator Taft charged," Murray continued, "that by failing to permit the Case bill to become law you were responsible for high prices which, according to his argument, the Case bill would have averted by weakening unions.

"This is the most revealing admission and the most amazing charge which has come from a man in public life in a long, long time.

Miners' Protest Strike Folds On Leader's Self-Interest Plea

Uniontown, Pa., June 10 (AP).—The so-called "protest" strike by some 17,000 soft coal miners in Pennsylvania and Indiana over pending labor legislation appeared to be breaking up tonight as the United Mine Workers took to the radio in an effort to get the men back to work.

Local radio stations carried at half-hour intervals an appeal from William Hynes, president of UMW District 4 where the walkouts centered, that "to protect the membership of District 4, United Mine Workers of America, all men who are idle in protest of the labor bill are urged to return to work immediately."

As a result of a meeting with Hynes earlier today, a spokesman for the 785 workers at the Isabella mine of Weirton Coal Co. said the men would return to their jobs tomorrow.

Other Western Pennsylvania pits reported going back in the morning are the Clyde No. 2 and Emerald mines of the Hillman Coal & Coke Co., employing 400 and 600 men respectively and Industrial Colliers Co.'s No. 53.

Two other mines, Donald 3 of the Bridgeview Coal Co. with 74 workers, and Vesta 5 of Jones & Laughlin Stell Corp. with 1400 men, already were back in operation.

Marshall and Churchill Favor United Europe

By The Associated Press

Efforts in Congress to promote the idea of a "United States of Europe" won conditional approval of Secretary of State Marshal yesterday, along with a new indorsement by Winston Churchill.

Marshall is "deeply sympathetic toward the general objective," he wrote, "but we should make it clear that it is not our purpose to impose upon the peoples of Europe any particular form of political or economic association."

Churchill, wartime Prime Minister of Great Britain, radioed: "I have been encouraged by the evidence of support for United Europe in America."

Both leaders addressed their comment to a resolution pending in the Senate and House Foreign Affairs Committees which would put Congress on record as favoring "the creation of a United States of Europe within the framework of the United Nations."

Views Given In Letter

Marshall's views, disclosed yesterday on Capitol Hill, were expressed in a letter dated June 4 to Chairman Vandenberg (R., Mich.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which had requested a State Department report. That committee is considering resolutions introduced by Senators Fulbright (D., Ark.) and Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah).

Churchill stated his position in a terse radiogram on June 6 to Represensentative Hale Boggs (D., La.), author of the companion bill in the House.

Vandenberg told a reporter that his committee has no present plans for action on the resolution, that "we have a lot of must legislation that has priority over it."

Mashall, assuming that the general phrasing of the resolution was intended "for the purpose of indorsing a principle without raising numerous important questions of detail," wrote that he is "deeply sympathetic toward the general objective of the resolution."

That objective, he added, is to "encourage the peoples of Europe to cooperate together more closely for their common good and in particular to encourage them to cooperate together to promote the economic recovery of Europe as a whole."

"Of course," Marshall wrote, "the United States wants a Europe which is not divided against itself, a Europe which is better than that it replaces. Only as we can inspire hope of that can we expect men to endure what must be endured and make the great effort which must be made if wars are to be avoided and civilization is to survive in Europe."

'Good Neighbor' at Work...

PRESIDENT PLANTS TREE IN CANADA—President Harry Truman plants a Canadian sugar maple tree on the grounds of Government House, official residence of the Dominion's Governor General. TRUMAN—From Page 1

everybody was that Mr. Truman had dropped in, and added:

"It is an honor that will long be remembered by Canadians."

Then came the cries of "Hear, hear," and "Hooray."

There were more such cries when Prime Minister Mackenzie King said how proud all Canada was that the American President had taken part in the little ceremony.

Viscount Alexander referred to Mr. Truman as the leader of that country "which is not only our friend and neighbor but which also has been our ally in two world wars."

The reception which President Truman got on his arrival here this afternoon was not as tumultuous as the one he got in Mexico City four months ago. However, there was no mistaking the genuine friendliness behind it.

Nearly the whole population of Ottawa (165,000) appeared to be on the streets. Some waved the British Union Jack, some the Red Ensign of Canada, some the tricolor of France and a good many the Stars and Stripes of the United States.

The sun was out for the first time in days, band music filled the air, and tulips bloomed all along the island park drive that Mr. Truman followed on his way to Government House. Curiously these tulips were one of the few reminders of the recent war. The bulbs were sent over by Crown Princess Juliana of Holland, who found sanctuary in Canada when the Nazis overran her homeland.

Conflict Noted In U. S. Reports On Potatoes

Conflicting statements about potatoes came out of the Department of Agriculture yesterday.

S. R. Smith, chief of the Fruit and Vegetable Branch, told a House Agriculture Subcommittee there are too many potatoes.

The Department, he said, would gladly sell thousands of bushels for as little as $5 a carload to starch or alcohol mills.

Or, he added, they would as gladly give them free to any worthy charitable institution or school.

Otherwise, he said, they will have to destroy them as they already have destroyed thousands of bushels of this year's crop in southern States.

On the other hand, the Crop Reporting Board of the department warned that this year's crop will be less than two thirds last year's record production.

Smaller Harvest Forecast

The board predicted a total harvest of only 56 million bushels compared with 85 million in 1946, and a prewar average of 51½ million.

One potato expert at the department, however, said that weather since June 1, the date of the forecast, has seriously threatened those figures.

"Late potatoes," he said, "are far behind schedule in Maine, New York, Michigan and Wisconsin due to recent cold and wet weather.

"Unless the crop gets started within the next week, there is definite danger of a severe shortage next fall and winter."

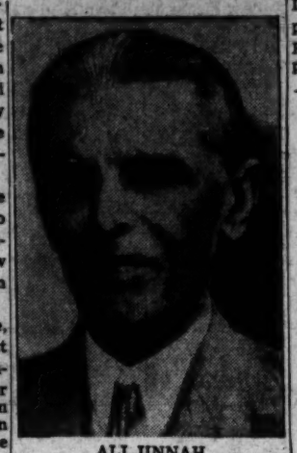
Lahore Seen as Capital City of Moslem State of Pakistan

New Delhi, India, June 10 (AP).—Informed observers said tonight Lahore probably would become the capital of the new Moslem nation of Pakistan, and that Mahomed Ali Jinnah would almost certainly head the country as its "George Washington" who achieved independence from the British.

The working committee of the Moslem League was called into session by Jinnah, the league president, to select the site of the new capital, but postponed a decision today.

Most persons agreed that Lahore, capital of the Punjab, had the best chance because of its central location in what will become the major part of Pakistan—Northwestern India. Also under consideration were Rawalpindi, deeper in the Punjab, and Karachi, on the Arabian Sea. The new Pakistan regime will take form initially as a dominion, probably in August.

Jinnah said in an interview that he hoped the transfer of power from Britain to the two Indian nations could be accomplished peacefully.



ALI JINNAH

Communal violence was reported, meanwhile, in at least two communities. A dispatch to the Indian News Chronicle said 32 persons were killed in a riot in the Pilibnit district of central united provinces. One person was killed and six others injured in a bomb explosion in Lahore, and a gardner was fatally stabbed in the famous Lawrence Gardens of that city.

High Tribunal Settles Case After 16 Years

The courts took just a little over 16 years to make up their minds about Ford Shane's insurance.

But they got it done Monday afternoon out at the Supreme Court and at last his folks know they're not going to collect.

Shane died way back in Hoover's Administration, on May 8, 1931, after a doctor gave him a dose of butyn—a drug harmless to most of us but straight poison to Shane. Of course the doctor didn't know about this allergy, nor did Shane, or anybody else, until it was too late. Shane was 48 years old at the time.

Mother Files Claim

A month later his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Shane, of Mount Vernon, S. Dak., filed her claim for his $6300 insurance policy, with the Order of United Commercial Travelers of America. And here's what it took to settle it, by years:

1931—The company turned down the claim, saying Shane's death was not an accident.

1931—Federal court in South Dakota said it was, and ordered the company to pay off.

1933—A Federal Circuit Court of Appeals set this order aside.

Begins New Suit

1934—Mrs. Shane turned her claim over to Edward C. Wolfe of Ohio, and he began a new suit in the South Dakota State courts. Nothing much happened for six years, except that the company filed an answer.

1940—The company filed a new answer, pointing out that the policy required suits on claims to be started in six months after they were turned down.

1942—A State judge heard the case, but died before ruling.

1943—Another State judge heard the case.

1944—This one lived and decided the company must pay off.

Argued Again in 1946

1945—The South Dakota Supreme Court said so, too.

1946—The Supreme Court here heard the case, and set it down to be argued all over again, which was done last November.

1947—Justice Burton spoke for a bare majority in holding that the South Dakota courts must respect an Ohio law which allows insurance companies to require that suits be started in six months. This, even though a South Dakota law says all such clauses in contracts are void.

Justice Black spoke with unusual force, for four dissenters, saying Burton's doctrine was revolutionary, that it violated the Constitution and most of the rules in the law books, as well.

How to prepare hot dishes with cold cuts

Spicy cold meats are the foundation of many good-eating summer meals. Included here are some cold-meat dishes that will get the cook out of the kitchen quickly and still provide the one hot dish every one wants no matter how high the temperature.

MOCK PATE DE FOIE GRAS: Mash ½ pound of liver sausage. Stir in 1 tablespoon of mayonnaise, 2 tablespoons lemon juice and ¼ teaspoon prepared mustard; blend well. Chill thoroughly. Serve on crisp crackers.

BARBECUED COLD MEAT KABOBS: Cut a favorite cold luncheon meat such as bologna or pressed ham into 1-inch cubes. For each person string 4 to 6 of these on a metal skewer or a long, pointed wooden stick alternately with slices of dry onion. Broil kabobs 10 minutes or until brown, basting frequently with barbecue sauce made this way: Chop a small onion; sauté it in 2 tablespoons salad oil until tender; stir in 1 teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce and 1 cup of catsup; season with salt and heat through before pouring over kabobs.

SALAMI CORNUCOPIAS: Spread thin slices of salami with cream cheese softened with cream. Roll each slice plain or around a small sweet pickle. Hold cornucopia together by sticking toothpicks through it. Chill thoroughly. Cut into easy-eating pieces by slicing between each toothpick.

SPAGHETTI-HAM BUNDLES: Allowing 2 slices of meat for each person, put about 3 tablespoons of hot canned spaghetti with tomato sauce in the center of a slice of boiled ham; spaghetti sticks out at each end. Roll up meat around spaghetti and stick toothpicks through bundle to hold it together. Broil bundles about 10 minutes until meat is heated slightly and browned on top. Pour any remaining sauce over bundles before serving. Sprinkle with grated Parmesan cheese, if desired.

GLAZED BAKED LUNCHEON MEAT: Score a 2-pound piece of luncheon meat or bologna by cutting a pattern of diamonds across top. For glaze, stir together ½ cup soft bread crumbs, ¼ cup brown sugar and 3 tablespoons of orange or pineapple juice to make a thick paste. Spread glaze over top of meat; bake in a moderately hot oven (375 F.) 20 minutes or until meat is heated through and glaze is golden brown on top. Serve hot or cold. Serves 6 to 8.

Senate Given Bill to Avert Army Crisis

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Legislation was sped to the Senate floor yesterday to avert a threatened Army manpower crisis July 1.

Declining enlistments and the expiration of a temporary wartime law will "tie Army recruiting into a knot" unless congressional relief is forthcoming, an Army officer said.

Meanwhile, the House Armed Service Committee prepared to open hearings on universal military training legislation this morning. Dr. Karl Compton, chairman of the presidential commission which recommended such training, will be the first witness.

The bill approved by the Senate Armed Services Committee would:

1. Authorize definite long-term enlistments—up to six-year periods.

2. Permit Army noncoms of the first three grades to "enroll for a career." They would serve for indefinite periods with the same privilege to resign as officers have. Fifty-dollar bonuses would be paid for each year of service.

3. Promotion would be speeded in the lower ranks and men could reenlist in their same rank after not more than three months out of the service instead of 20 days as at present.

In approving the bill, the Senate committee made public a report declaring that failure of Congress to act in the emergency "will virtually stop all enlistments in the Army."

What has happened is this:

Regular Army peacetime enlistments are for one or three years. Enlistments in time of war or emergency are for the duration plus six months. Those provisions are written into permanent law. The Armed Services Recruiting Act of 1945, however, authorized 18-month- two-year and three-year enlistments during the emergency. That law expires the end of this month.

Beginning July 1, if Congress fails to pass the War Department's bill, the Army will be able to recruit men for the duration plus six months only.

Maj. Gen. Willard S. Paul, Army personnel chief, told The Post that such a recruiting system would "wreck" the War Department's new enlisted career plan as well as most of its manpower policies.

Volunteers have slacked off since the expiration of the Selective Service Act, Paul said. In May, enlistments totaled only about 15,000. In April they were only slightly higher. The Army wants an aerage of 30,000 a month.

Army chiefs, however, have been encouraged by mounting longer enlistments and an expected upturn this month and next. If both fail, they must reconsider the question of asking for a new draft law.

The Senate committee made these changes in sending the Army-sponsored bill to the floor:

1. Added an amendment abolishing muster-out pay for men enlisting in the future. During the war and until now, all enlisted men, lieutenants and captains have received a $100 to $300 bonus upon discharge.

2. Struck out a proviso repealing the 280,000 limit on the Army's peacetime strength. Legislation will be considered later, setting a new and higher peace-time limit.

3. Inserted an amendment lowering the age limit for enlistment in the National Guard from 18 to 17 years.

Army privates would advance to Pfc after four months service instead of six under the bill.

Minister Says Portuguese Will Fight for Macao

Lisbon, June, 10 (U.P.).—Colonial Minister Teofilo Duarte said today that Portuguese residents would fight if necessary to keep Macao, off the China coast, and Portuguese Goa in India.

Receiving a delegation from Macao, Duarte said that the island would not be returned to China "without Portuguese blood flowing copiously throughout the city's streets."

Macao, near Hongkong at the mouth of the Canton River, comprises about 6 square miles. It has a population of about 375,000

GOP Predicts Unification Bill's Passage

Republican leaders on both sides of the Capitol forecast favorable action this session on the long-pending Army-Navy unification bill.

Representative James W. Wadsworth (R., N. Y.), a ranking member of the House Executive Expeditures Committee, said an attempt will be made tomorrow to close hearings on the measure. He thought committee action within 10 days was likely.

"The prospects for passage look very good," he told The Post. "The House leadership is behind the bill and the strong favorable vote it received in the Senate committee helps."

Senator Chan Gurney (R., S. Dak.), chairman of the Senate Armed Service Committee, hopes to get the unification bill before the Senate week after next. GOP leaders have scheduled the measure for floor consideration after the pending Bulwinkle railroad agreement bill and the presidential succession plan are out of the way.

Despite the 12 to 0 vote of the Senate committee in favor of unification, it is expected that Senator Robertson (R., Wyo.) will lead a floor fight against it. Robertson opposed the bill during hearings but was absent when the vote was taken. A majority of the Senate, however, is believed behind the bill.

Meanwhile, the House Executive Expenditures Committee heard Secretary of the Navy Forrestal and former Representative Melvin J. Maas testify on unification.

Forrestal told the Congressmen that naval officers may testify against the bill if they choose without any fear of retaliation.

Representative Porter Hardy (D., Va.) declared that a "high ranking naval officer told me that if a poll were taken, 80 per cent of the officers of the Navy would vote against this bill."

Hardy added that when he proposed that the officer testify, the latter replied, "My God, I'd be sent to the Antarctic."

Forrestal answered that officers are "quite free to come down and express their opinions without fear." They were so informed months ago, he recalled.

The Navy chief admitted that all fears about the effect of unification had not been removed, but declared they were based on last year's merger bill, which he also opposed.

Questioned about possible savings under the proposed setup, Forrestal said a likely one was abolition of the Army's Coast Artillery. He observed that our coast guns had not fired a shot against an enemy in 50 years, and suggested that any Secretary of National Security would see no further use for them.

A Father's Day Message from the Father of Our Country

"HAPPILY, the government of the United States, which gives to bigotry no sanction, to persecution no assistance, requires only that those who live under its protection should demean themselves as good citizens"

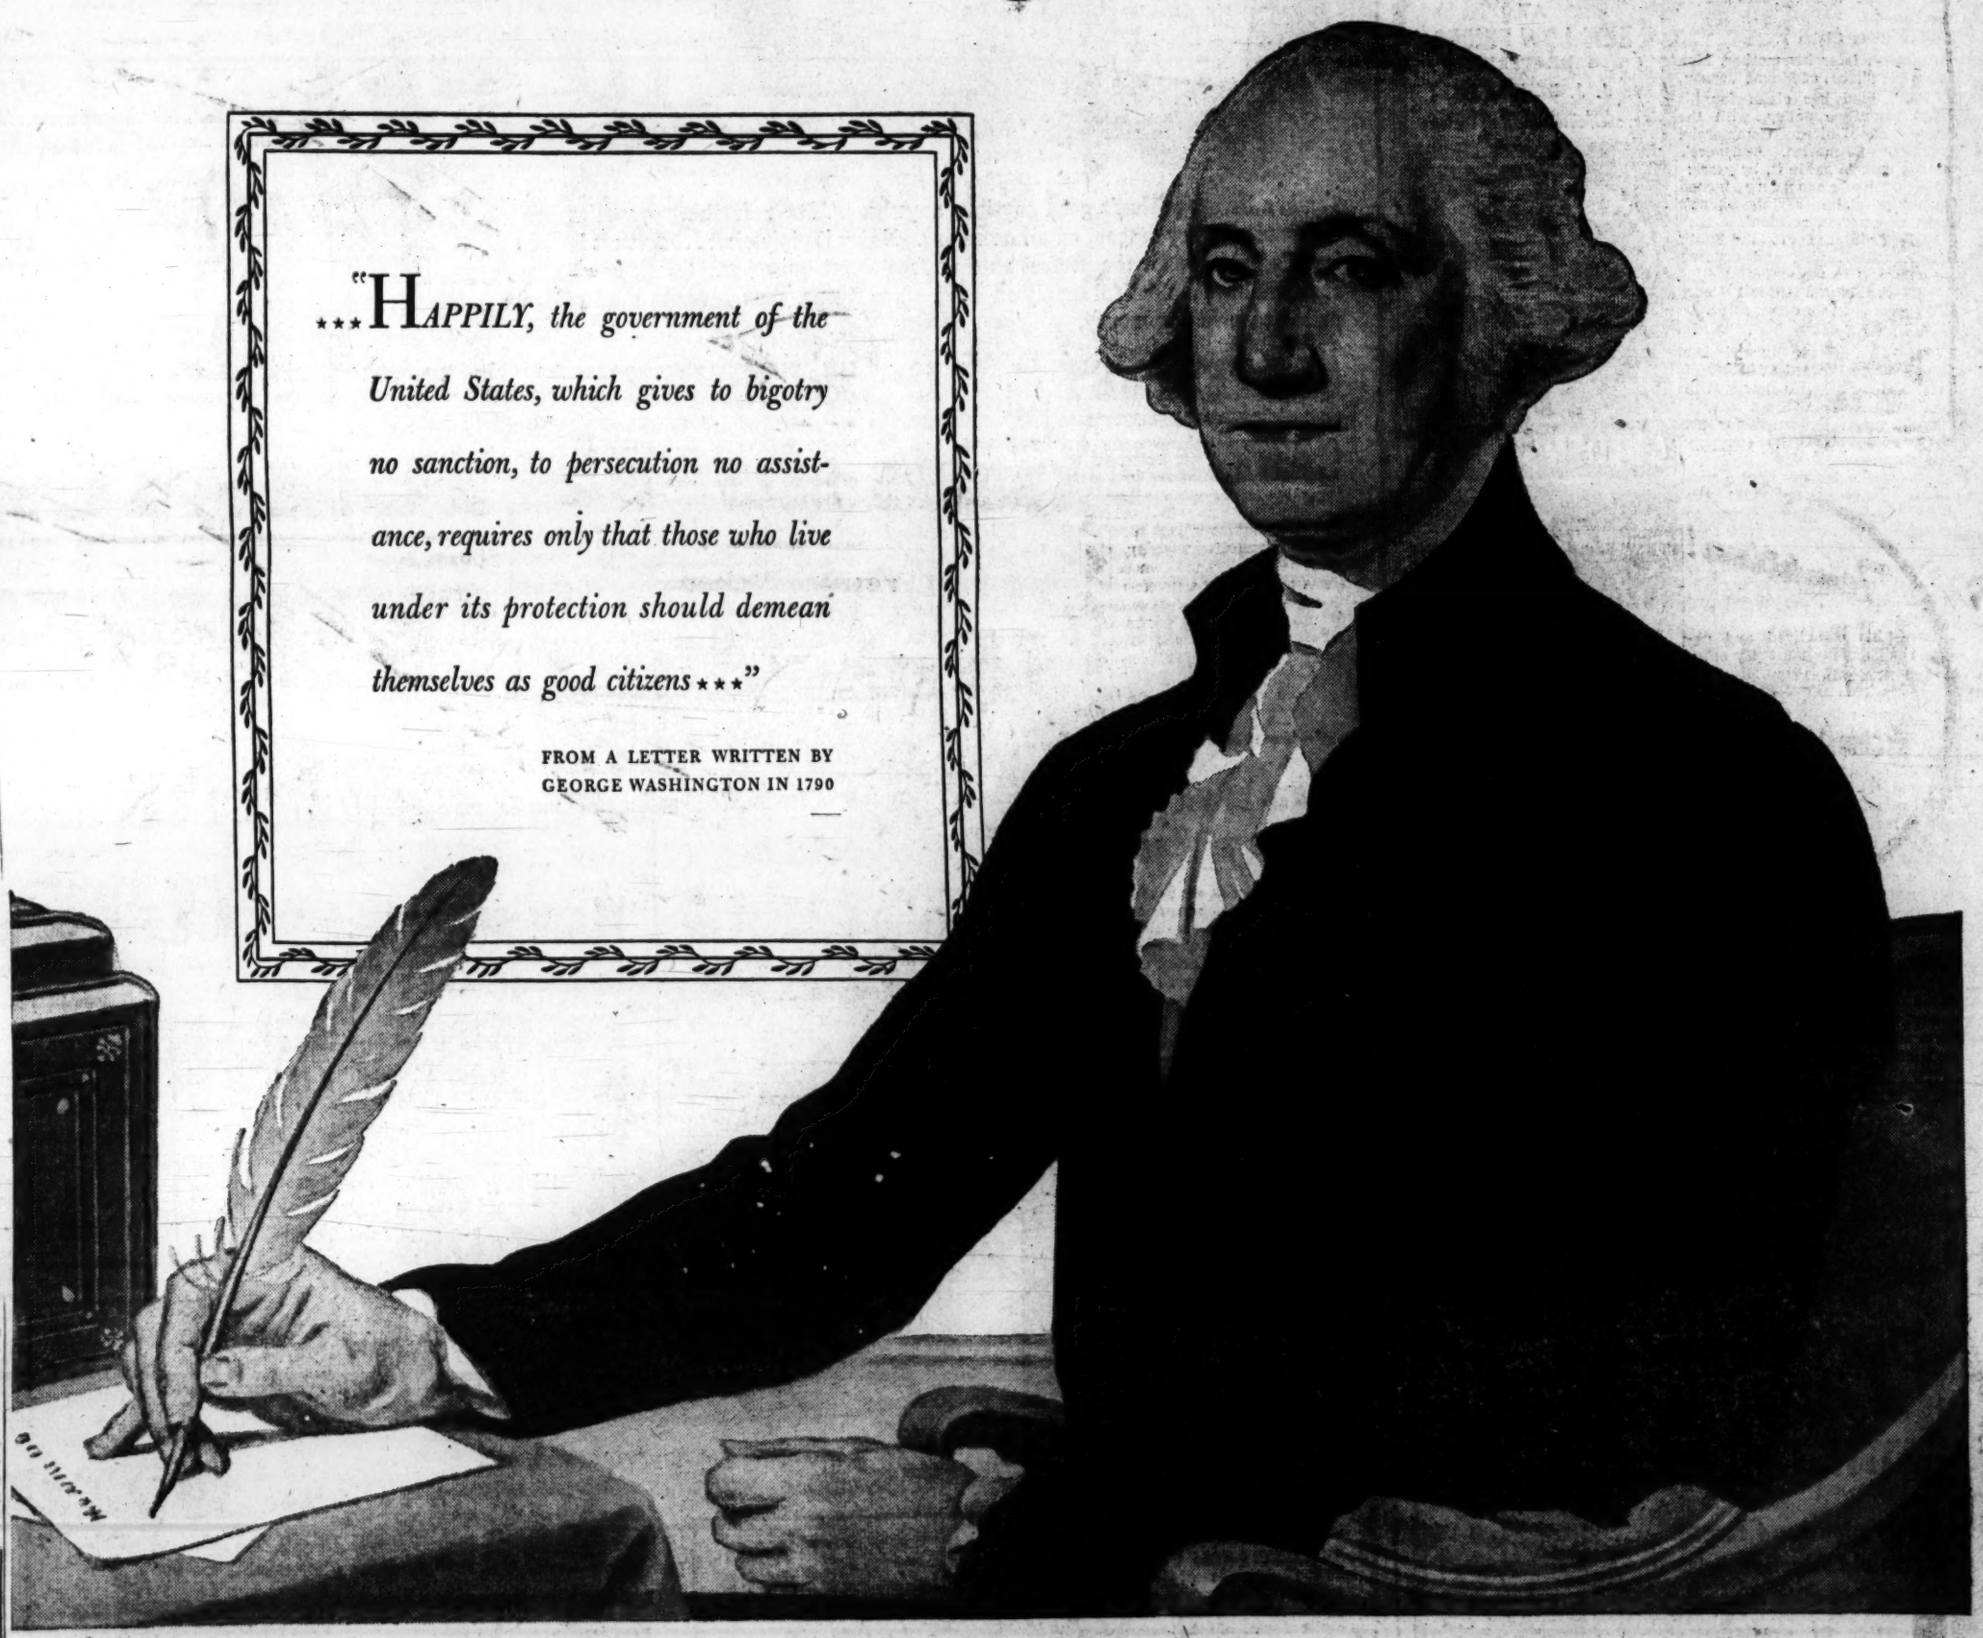
FROM A LETTER WRITTEN BY GEORGE WASHINGTON IN 1790



GEORGE WASHINGTON'S solemn words echo with equal truth today. Now, as then, the duty of a good citizen is to avoid the extremes of bigotry and intolerance — to practice moderation in thought, word and deed.

And moderation, as we of The House of Seagram have so long publicly insisted, should include moderation in the use of whiskey. For one of America's respected freedoms is the freedom to enjoy this luxury.

Yet whoever does so must remember that such freedom carries its own high responsibility — the responsibility to "drink moderately." Only thus, in our considered opinion, can he truly merit the title of "good citizen"—and good father.

Dr. Garsson Saw Little of May, He Says

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

Dr. Henry M. Garsson swore yesterday that during the whole war he spent only about six or eight hours with A. J. May.

Dr. Garsson and his brother, Murray, are accused of buying May's influence for more than $50,000 when the former Congressman was House Military chairman and the Garssons were in the munition business. All three are on trial for bribery and conspiracy in the District Court.

As he finished nearly seven days of testimony in his own behalf, the pudgy, fast talking Garsson renewed his denials of all the charges, saying May's efforts to help the Garsson business were in May's official capacity, to help war production. They were together only a few hours in all four years, Garsson said, not counting two days when May inspected the Garsson plants in Illinois.

Paisley Asks Short Questions

Having denied every point of the long indictment, Garsson squared himself for cross-examination at the hands of Prosecutor William A. Paisley. Paisley began with a line of short questions, which went from point to point without dwelling on any one for very long. Here are some of Dr. Garsson's answers:

He spent little time with May himself, and he did not know about his brother's trip to Cuba early in 1942, at the same time May went there.

He owed one-third of the stock of both Batavia Metals and Erie Basin Metals, and all of Cumberland Lumber Co—the firm the Government contends was set up to cover the May payoff and really belonged to the Congressman.

There was no secret about May running Cumberland for Dr. Garsson. On the contrary, "the whole world knew it."

But, Dr. Garsson would not deny that he kept the fact from Allen B. Gellman, the Erie Basin president.

The Garssons got 10 million dollars in war orders before Dr. Garsson ever met May. After he met him they got 50 or 60 million.

Cumberland Invoices

From these questions Paisley turned to the three invoices on which the Garsson companies paid the Cumberland lumber firm $33,000.

The invoices purported to have come from the Cumberland company in Kentucky, but FBI experts showed they were written on a typewriter in the Garsson office in Chicago. Henry Glick, a Garsson official, testified that he got the invoices—and orders to pay them—from Dr. Garsson.

The doctor told a special grand jury he didn't know how Glick got the papers and that he himself did not see them until late in 1945, a year after they were dated. For this story the grand jury indicted Dr. Garsson on two counts of perjury, but he stuck to it yesterday.

He said he didn't know whose idea it was to get up the invoices, or who made them up, or where the information for them came from or whether any lumber really was stored in Kentucky as the invoices said.

Paisley handed Dr. Garsson a green stenographer's notebook. The doctor couldn't read the shorthand, but he said the writing in it was that of his secretary, Beulah Teitlebaum.

Paisley then handed over the invoices. They were dated October 11, 23 and November 2, 1944. Paisley pointed to a page in the notebook where the same dates were written. With the dates were figures, amounts of money and quantities of lumber. One after another Dr. Garsson admitted that down to the last cent and the last foot of lumber the figures in the notebook and on the invoices were the same.

Denies Dictating Invoices

"Do you still deny that you dictated the invoices to Miss Teitlebaum yourself?" Paisley asked.

Dr. Garsson said he certainly did. He said the notebook proved he did not make up the papers, because there were expressions there that he would never use.

At Expense Of Health

We are at a loss to understand the reasoning of those Congressmen who seem to think that the way to overcome deficiencies in our educational system is to skimp on public health and welfare. The need for new schools is acute, especially schools for Negro children who are the chief victims of doubling up and part-time classes. We hope that Chairman Horan of the House District Appropriations Subcommittee can find ways of correcting this situation without further delay, but to switch health money to schools would be like cutting off a leg to patch up an arm.

We doubt that any public project in the District is more urgent than the construction of a children's building at Gallinger Hospital. When a child was burned to death a few years ago and tragedy of much larger proportions was narrowly averted, the crippled children at Gallinger were moved from their firetrap to a location that is scarcely more desirable—the second floor of the building for psychopathic cases. This whole psychopathic building was condemned by a committee of specialists about four years ago. It is not the type of acommodation that can be kept in use with safety while funds for replacement of any part of it are diverted to other purposes.

The acute need of the Health Department for better accommodations is brought into sharp focus by the fact that it is now using three abandoned schools for clinics and preparing to use another. It doesn't seem to us to make sense to consider only schools in the program for public improvements when other departments have to take structures that the schools are casting off. One has to remember that health clinics accommodate children no less than do the schools.

The most satisfactory approach to the problem, as we have suggested before, would be a Federal loan to the District to meet the present emergency due to the city's phenomenal growth. Then schools, hospital buildings, clinics, and staff housing to permit the full use of Glenn Dale Sanatorium could be provided without having to choose between such critical requirements. The House Committee cannot twist the snitching of health funds for schools into a satisfactory substitute for such a long-range program.

Rail Safety

The Railway Age has taken up the cudgels to defend the roads against charges that railway travel is becoming increasingly unsafe. To substantiate its thesis that the roads "hold the palm for safety of travelers," it cites figures of passenger death rates per hundred million miles traveled, showing that in 1946 the rate was 0.18 for the rails and 1.2 for the airlines and in 1945, 0.16 for the rails, 2.1 for the airlines, 0.17 for buses and 2.9 for private automobiles. The Railway Age further notes that in 1946 collisions and derailments as well as the number of fatalities and injuries to passengers were very much lower than in 1920—a year comparable in many respects to 1946.

Over-all national accident figures of this kind simply confuse the issue and throw no useful light on the causes of train wrecks—the first step toward correction. Such data will not dissipate the growing uneasiness of the traveling public resulting from what the Railway Age calls "recent isolated but spectacular" passenger-train accidents. Moreover, some roads have had a disproportionately large number of accidents, with shockingly high fatalities. The public would like to know to what extent excessive speed has contributed to such fatalities or whether the fault is chiefly due to imperfections of equipment, failure of manpower or other causes.

Efforts to prove the comparative safety of rail travel by relating fatalities to mileage are particularly misleading. This is a favorite device for soothing the public whenever particularly bad accidents occur in the air or on the rails. But again it diverts attention from the only fact that really matters: the persistence of accidents of appalling magnitude. Obviously, the incidence of such accidents can be statistically minimized by relating them to mileage since transportation, on ground as well as in the air, has been greatly speeded up, and journeys once considered long have become brief interruptions in the day's work.

The national aim—and, of course, the aim of our systems of public transportation—is to eliminate accidents, and that can only be done by a determined endeavor to establish their causes and seek for remedies. A smart statistical barrage designed to erect a defense against criticism is more likely to augment public nervousness than to reestablish confidence.

Labor Bill And Politics

Political analysts are busy weighing the possible effects of a presidential veto of the labor bill on the 1948 election. President Truman is advised, on one hand, that he will certainly lose the labor vote if he signs the bill, and, on the other hand, that if he vetoes the bill he can kiss the nonlabor vote goodby. So far as we can see, the advice from one interested faction comes very close to canceling out the advice from the other. The country will be the gainer if the President discards all arguments as to the effect of his action on his political future and looks at the bill solely in its relation to the national welfare.

There is one practical aspect of the matter, however, which we do not think the President can overlook. If he should veto the bill, there is very little chance that his veto would be effective. Congress would almost certainly override it. The chief consequence of a veto would be to drag the whole complicated problem of labor-management relations into the 1948 campaign. Organized labor would probably be even less inclined to accept the new law and conform to its provisions under these circumstances than were the employers of many unorganized industries to accept the Wagner Act in the first years of its operation when they expected it to be declared unconstitutional. In other words, a veto would seem to open the way toward repeal of the Taft-Hartley measure if the Democratic Party should be returned to power. In the ensuing period the issue would certainly be exploited from every political angle and a good deal of turmoil and uncertainty would have to be expected.

Critics of the labor bill are contending that it will antagonize union men to the extent of making settlement of labor-management disputes more difficult. If that argument has any validity, how much more will the relationships between employers and unions be exacerbated if the whole question of labor reforms becomes a football of national politics! The issue as to whether the Taft-Hartley bill shall become law has been virtually settled. As we see it, one of the major questions the President will have to decide is whether to make an all-out assault upon the bill, thus injecting it into the 1948 campaign, or to sign it and seek correction of its defects on a basis of expert study and nonpartisan cooperation. We think that he can best serve the long-range interests of labor, management and the Nation as a whole by following the latter course.

Mutilated Tax Bill

Pathetic, voteless Washington witnessed another field day in the House of Representatives on Monday, and at the end the latest effort to give the city an equitable income tax was in tatters. "Are we going to play politics with the people of this city," Representative Horan asked, "in the belief that they cannot come back at us through the power of the ballot box?" There was no answer in the form of words. But the answer that came in the form of votes was an emphatic "yes." The House said that this city of government must not tax the income of Government employes who live here and reap the benefits of its municipal services. It is a decision so utterly irresponsible and so devoid of the mature judgment that is expected of legislators functioning as a city council as to bring the whole system by which the District is controlled into contempt.

The House hastened to jack up the District real estate tax rate from $1.75 to $2 per hundred dollars of valuation. Since assessments have already been increased 20 per cent this year, the net result will be a 31 per cent increase in property taxes. One has only to remember that more than 50 per cent of the land area of the District is exempted from taxes, most of the exempt area being owned by the Government, to see the inappropriateness of squeezing more revenue from this diminishing source. Yet that seems to political-minded Congressmen preferable to a fair and straightforward income tax.

In its scramble to avoid taxing constituents living in Washington the House has once more concocted a monstrosity. It says that a man who lives here for more than seven months of the year and works for a private business shall pay the local income tax, while his neighbor across the street who may have lived here for 20 years and who works for the Government does not need to pay it. That kind of discrimination would be outrageous in any democratic society. It is especially outrageous here because Washington is a city devoted to government. The House favors a tax which exempts employes of the District's one basic industry.

Representatives Bates and Dirksen had gone as far as reason permitted in making their income-tax proposal unobjectionable on political grounds. All question of double taxation was eliminated by giving local residents full credit for any income tax or intangible property tax they might have to pay to States in which they claim a legal domicile. In spite of that concession the House adopted such a sweeping amendment to exempt Government workers that it may make even the existing income-tax law unworkable. Once more, therefore, the people of the District must look to the Senate for simple justice. There will be much gratification that the House agreed to increase the Federal payment for District services rendered, but this cannot wipe out the inequity so carelessly written into the income-tax section of the bill.

A Separate FBI

What would be the jurisdiction and the function of an independent Federal Bureau of Investigation? Merely to ask this question is to expose the fallacy at the root of Senator Homer Ferguson's suggestion that the FBI be divorced from the Department of Justice and established as a separate agency. As an instrumentality of the Department of Justice, the Government's legal division, the FBI has certain clearly defined duties—in general, the investigation of offenses against those laws of the United States which fall within the department's jurisdiction, together with such special related assignments by executive order of the President as the prevention of espionage and sabotage. There is no more sense in divorcing it from the department it was designed to serve than there would be in divorcing the law-enforcement agencies of the Treasury from their parent organization.

As a matter of principle, a Federal police agency should not be an independent entity. It should be an instrument of policy, not a shaper of policy, directed, as the FBI is, by a nonpolitical, professional police officer who can be expected to retain his position despite changes in Administration, but operating under the general supervision of a policy-making Cabinet official responsible, as a part of the Administration, to the American people. In large measure, the FBI has grown to greatness because it has had a continuity of direction which would have been impossible had its chief been a political appointee. This has been equally true of other highly efficient police agencies such as the Secret Service and the Bureau of Narcotics. Senator Ferguson's proposal to take the FBI out of the Department of Justice stems from his suspicion that it was hamstrung in the Kansas City vote fraud investigation by a politically motivated Attorney General. But the remedy he proposes is no remedy at all: an FBI director, especially if he were politically appointed, might be politically motivated, too.

To whose orders would an independent FBI be responsive? Would its director have a roving commission to investigate wherever, whenever and however he pleased without limitation as to scope and jurisdiction? We think that it would be highly dangerous to lodge such authority in any police agency or police chief. The only analogues to such authority are secret police agencies such as the NKVD, the powers of which are plenary, the influence of which is omnipresent. They are manifestations of the police state—have grown, indeed, to be the state itself.

Messersmith's Mission

The clumsily handled liquidation of our differences with Argentina seems to have pleased nobody, least of all the Argentines. According to the newspaper Democracia, reported as owned by Eva Duarte Peron, wife of President Peron, the withdrawal of our Ambassador, George Messersmith, is "an unfriendly gesture." Other newspapers comment in the same vein. Their assumption is that Ambassador Messersmith had been dismissed. The exact contrary is, of course, the case. Ambassador Messersmith was sent to Buenos Aires on a specific mission which in the nature of things was limited in duration, and this was so stated at the time. The mission was to obtain Argentine compliance with the anti-Nazi pledges contained in the Act of Chapultepec. It is now held by the President to have been completed, so that there is no further need for Mr. Messersmith's services in Buenos Aires. It is well known here that Mr. Messersmith would not have undertaken the assignment on any other terms. He was far from well when he accepted it, and only did so under pressure from the White House. It looks as if the Administration, in its hasty anxiety to wind up its argument with President Peron, forgot to prepare the ground in Argentina, let alone in the United States. Actually the Argentines, at least the Peronistas among them, should have regarded the Messersmith retirement as a complimentary and not an unfriendly gesture, especially as the President let out Assistant Secretary of State Braden ahead of Ambassador Messersmith. Rumor has it that this was an office blunder, but the fact remains that the priority was established. The trouble is that this explanation cannot yet be made to the fair owner of the Democracia, since she is now being received royally by Franco, from whose government we withdrew our diplomatic envoy in keeping with the decision of the United Nations Assembly.

THE HOUSE

And then we saw it:
a house cutting blue into angles—tall with trees that bent a path around it—
wisteria fall tangled with fragrance and wings of bees.

O sweet, sweet
the song sparrow, and the faint willow-creek sounding, and sudden as hummingbird,
the heart pounding:
this is the place!
This, the glass-clear dream peopled with children—the wind-silvered grass springing to small quick feet!

Indian Education

In view of your excellent editorial of June 2 "Skimping on Education," it appears that The Post might care to examine into the House slash of appropriations for the Office of Indian Affairs, particularly those asked for the education of Indian children.

I have noticed articles and letters in The Post protesting the cut in funds for Department of the Interior reclamation and other activities, but none objecting to the 25 per cent reduction of money needed for the American Indians.

Under the Constitution, laws, treaties and executive orders, these Indians are the direct responsibility of the Federal Government. In few instances do the States have any responsibility for them.

The majority of them are poverty-stricken. A large number cannot speak English. Three quarters of the 20,000 school-age children on the Navajo reservation get no education at all because the Government does not provide the schools although it promised by solemn treaty to do so. A very large majority of the 56,000 Navajo Indians cannot speak English because of inadequate educational facilities. They want schools but they have no vote to back up their demands because the States of Arizona and New Mexico, where most of them live, deny them suffrage.

Properly our Government appropriates tremendous sums for the relief of the needy among our enemies. Conversely, the House slashes deep into the fund requests for Indians who are American citizens and who need more help and not less than was requested. So unless the cuts are restored some of the Indian schools and hospitals will be closed.

The Indians constitute a very small minority of our population. True, they have friends in and outside Congress. But there seems scant likelihood that the Government ever will appropriate sufficient money to accelerate their education so that they may be qualified to earn adequate livings in a non-Indian world and eventually to conduct their own affairs without Federal supervision.

Perhaps it may be deemed sentimental to note that Indians won about every kind of decoration in World War II, including two awards of the Congressional Medal of Honor, and that more than 25,000 Indian men and women served in the armed forces of the United States.

What the Indian deserves and what he doesn't get is educational and other advantages which most other citizens receive as a matter of course.

Increased Production

One of the most pertinent articles regarding our present labor crisis was written by Mr. J. W. Nickerson for the April issue of Mechanical Engineering. The article is so thought provoking and rational in its approach, that I'm sending it on to you.

"Unless improvement is made concerning the problem of labor relations, unless productivity at least keeps pace with wages, unless labor costs stop their upward ascent, then industrial profits will disappear or diminish to the point where the American people will not wish to own private industry. The result would be a collectivistic ownership of some sort which would not only reduce our overall standard of living but would destroy many of our liberties.

"It is foolish to blind ourselves to the fact that Communists are making every effort to wipe out profits by forcing wages up and productivity down. The recent accent action of the stock market shows what the results may be.

"What is the answer? It is productivity. More goods per man-hour to match more money per man-hour. Today few disagree with this as a generality. It is accepted that increased productivity, causing lower labor costs, will result in lower prices, greater sales volume, greater employment, higher wages, and higher standards of living. Management, labor, and Government must unite on this as a general statement."

When the present Administration tried to work the miracle of increasing wages while holding price ceilings the wage-price spiral started upward. The true solution is not the negative one of restoring the OPA, rather it is the positive one of increasing the efficiency of labor. When this is done, and only when this is done, will prices return to normal.

Attack On Lincoln

With regard to the opinion expressed by Dr. Charles C. Tansill of Georgetown University concerning the culpability of Abraham Lincoln for precipitating the outbreak of the Civil War, may we close the discussion with the suggestion that the university have a "Tansillectomy"?

"Fascism In Action"

The Washington Post of June 6 reported that the House Administration Committee had postponed the decision whether to publish the document "Fascism in Action" pending the revision of passages which some people "might not like" or which contains "smears on business."

Assuming that those who prepared the report were competent to make it, are we, the American people, not capable of evaluating facts gathered by honest men without indulging in unjust recrimination?

As evidenced in Marquis Childs' column recently, monopolistic practices are bound to be an issue in the next presidential election. If fascism has any connection with business monopoly, we should know about it.

America has remained free largely through our antitrust laws. They prevent the concentration of power necessary to both fascism and communism.

Even the Bell Telephone System finds it more efficient to work through comparatively small regional companies. If every Nationwide industry had independent companies of the most efficient size coordinated through a committee made up of delegates from each company, stockholders could invest in the local companies, research could be conducted by the companies on a cooperative basis, and we should have a nice balance of efficiency, capitalism and freedom from dictatorship. Fascists and Communists would find the pickings too slim here and might eventually copy us.

AAF's Vulnerable Bomber

Your Mr. Norris is to be commended for the article on the B-36 in The Post of June 8. Commended because this is probably the first news the public has had about this plane which dispenses with the usual AAF hokum and releases facts rather well known within the services.

For example, it is well that the public be aware of the landing field problems introduced by these new flying monsters, if Congress is to be asked to appropriate for chains of ever longer air bases with ever thicker concrete runways. This is the first public notice I have seen that there are only three fields which can accommodate the B-36.

It is also interesting that the plane now goes only 300 miles per hour, or about the speed of the B-29. A plane as large as the B-36 presents a very juicy target; for ground gunners using high velocity rapid-fire projectiles with influence fuzes, or for jet fighters with rocket projectiles, or for antiaircraft guided missiles, jet propelled, with homing devices attached. There is as yet no very good airborne defense against such weapons besides speed and maneuverability on the part of the target plane. Obviously a plane of this size is about as maneuverable as the Queen Mary.

It is also about time the pose was dropped that a plane's maximum designed range bomb load represents a combat potential. Let us hope that later models of the B-36 will in fact carry five tons 10,000 miles rather than the 8000 the first models achieve. Up to now, it seems to me, the advertisements have said something about 10 or 20-ton bomb loads, and placed these figures in a misleading close proximity to the 10,000-mile figure.

The combat bombing radius of the plane is about 33 per cent of the range. Presumably we want the plane to come back. Thus the B-36 will be able to carry five tons to a target 3300 miles away, if all goes well. And is that 3300 nautical miles or statute miles—a difference of 15 per cent?

The production program of these planes is 100, in two years. In other words, at the end of two years we will have an ocean-hopping bomber force which will be capable of dropping 500 tons of bombs per mission, with a maximum frequency of about one mission per week, against transatlantic targets. All this article suggests to me is: (a) the horribly low and weak state of our military strength, resulting in large part from the fabulous claims of wonderful gadgets in production with which the AAF has lulled us into complacency since the war ended, and (b) a strong doubt as to whether these new flying battleships, and the whole concept of air war that goes with them, are not already as outmoded as the old U.S.S. Arkansas.

Yet General Ramey suggests that such bombers as the B-36 would largely eliminate the need for aircraft carriers. Maybe they are on the way out, too, but first let us have a little frank public airing of figures on the relative effectiveness of the heavy bomber and the carrier plane against targets. Has the public ever been told how grossly inaccurate and wasteful formation bombing from high altitude was proved during the war, in comparison to the low, close-in, accurate attacks by Navy fighters and dive bombers?

Is it known, for example, that in high altitude B-29 bombing during the war a good standard of accuracy required only half of the bombs to hit within 1500 feet of the center of the target, while photographic records of Navy dive bombing showed 50 per cent hits within 250 feet—a relative accuracy ration of 36 to 1? Is it known that the strategic bombing survey took a dim view of Army bombing accuracy in practice?

Are we building more, bigger, ever more vulnerable, and ever more expensive flying battleships to duplicate results of this sort? Why cannot the Army Air Forces give us more facts, so that we can properly evaluate the state of our military potential in the light of realities rather than wishful thinking?

Policy Post Offensive

By Malvina Lindsay

Sex Vs. Party Loyalty

ROCKRIBBED politicoes, already disturbed over growing defection from the party line, now have something else to worry about. A significant movement has started among women's groups to support by specific name, rather than the nebulous general term "woman," or even by lists of names, qualified members of their own sex for specific policy-making posts in Government and business.

Two State branches of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, those of New York and Mississippi, have started rolling the ball of indorsements of their national organization's new policy of getting behind definite women for definite offices. Action came after much discussion as to whether this would cause these nonpolitical groups to "get mixed up in politics." It was finally decided that the low state of women's representation in the United Nations' governing body, and in national, State and city government, and even in the upper stratas of business, required more definite action than had yet been taken.

THIS MOVE signals more aggressive attempts by women's groups generally to get more feminine balance into the running of the world. It is a step beyond the action inaugurated at the White House conference of 1944 when women leaders from throughout the country decided on the now famous list of qualified women.

This list is credited with having influenced the appointments of a sizable number of women to important policy-making posts. It was an answer to the customary official excuse, "We would be glad to appoint a woman, but where is one qualified?" Presented to high Government officials, it contained the names (which have so far been kept secret) of about 300 outstanding women, including lawyers, educators, economists, language experts, organizers, scientists and technicians of all kinds.

Previous to the drawing up of the list, women's groups had usually politely presented to officials resolutions asking that their sex be represented on delegations or commissions, or appointed to some particular post. This did not get them very far. More recently national organizations have frequently suggested several names of qualified women for posts they felt needed the feminine touch.

This new method of backing the definite woman on the basis of her capability, and forgetting her politics, may have its pitfalls, but at least it will answer the recent widespread charge that women's groups only talk, never act. Its procedure is not unlike that of the American Federation of Labor in indorsing candidates on their labor records irrespective of their politics.

IN ITS SIMPLEST terms the issue may simmer down to sex versus party loyalty. Yet it is not a question of backing any woman right or wrong. Only when a woman is thoroughly qualified, only when it is believed that she will do as well or better than a man in a job will she be officially supported. This of course still gives men the edge, since no one as yet is likely to inquire whether a man candidate for a post will be as good as a woman.

This rallying of women to their sex has recently been gaining momentum. It is a significant reversal of an earlier feminine attitude that often made hard the way of women in both the professions and politics. Many women leaders are realizing belatedly that they did not rally as they might have done behind the first woman member of the Cabinet, Miss Frances Perkins, when she was so often unjustly misrepresented and criticized.

The masculine ganging up on some women candidates in the last election revealed the need of sex loyalty. There is growing feeling, not only in women's nonpolitical organizations, but also in women's party divisions, that their sex has been pushed around too much when it comes to the running of public affairs that deeply concern them.

Also, significantly, last month, some of the six million women shareholders in America's corporations formed a federation, one of whose aims is to get more women on boards of directors and in executive and managerial positions in business. It plans to induce more women to attend stockholders' meetings and to express their ideas about management of the wealth they have so long passively held.

Sight Clinic

On behalf of the members of the board of trustees of the District of Columbia Society for the Prevention of Blindness, I wish to take this opportunity to thank you for the very fine article by Mr. Walter Pulliam, "Sight Clinic Pierces Gloom of Glaucoma," which appeared in the May 25 edition of The Post. Mr. Pulliam handled the material very well and certainly the article served as a means of interpreting to the community the symptoms and medical treatment of the eye condition, glaucoma. It was a definite contribution to a worth-while cause and the society has had many inquiries as a result of it.

The Soviet Advance

By Sumner Welles

America's Critical Role

WE ARE NOW engaged in an increasingly critical contest with the Soviet Union.

Soviet policy has been becoming clearer since the Moscow Conference. It is a policy which is "short of war." It pursues its immediate objective—the control of Europe and of the Mediterranean—through the accentuation of human misery, the provocation of class warfare, and even, if necessary, through Communist-directed and Communist-financed rebellion.

In elections that were relatively free the people of Hungary voted overwhelmingly for a democratic government. A Communist dictatorship has now been imposed upon the 33 per cent of the Hungarian people who had rejected communism. The Kremlin seeks to obtain control of Germany and Austria by a process of attrition. The Soviet strategy will be facilitated by the continued postponement of German and Austrian peace treaties, and by the increasingly serious economic condition of the peoples of those two countries.

Governments wholly subservient to Moscow are now firmly entrenched in Bulgaria, Romania, Albania, Yugoslavia, Hungary, and Poland. While the forms of democracy still persist in Czechoslovakia, no Czechoslovak government could fail to submit to Moscow's dictates. The advance of Soviet influence toward the West is rapid and continuous. The power of the Communist organizations in Italy and in France is already sufficient to paralyze the economic life of those two countries should Moscow give the word.

WHAT IS the United States doing to implement its policy of "So far and no further?"

Senator Vandenberg is altogether right in urging that the the Hungarian case be submitted to the United Nations. But even from the most optimistic viewpoint remedial action from that source would necessarily be long-delayed.

The Italian crisis has become acute. Prime Minister de Gasperi has felt compelled to eliminate from his cabinet the Communist saboteurs and their left-wing Socialist stooges. But he cannot obtain the support he needs if he is to survive politically unless the Italian people receive material help from the United States and receive it now. As Anne O'Hare McCormick well phrased it the other day, "Perhaps no country could be saved so easily or cheaply as Italy; at the present juncture none is so important to save. It is undoubtedly the next on Moscow's list." What is this Government doing to help? It has been most lavish with words. But no practical action has yet been taken.

In Greece, for lack of adequate planning during the many weeks which have elapsed since the Truman policy was first recommended to the Congress, not only has no economic assistance yet been made available to the Greek people, but the very principles under which we must operate have not yet been fixed.

THE UNITED STATES has never before found itself engaged in a contest of power politics such as that in which it is now reluctantly forced to take part.

We are confronted with the most dangerous crisis that has arisen since the war. If we are to succeed in our attempt to maintain the freedom of smaller countries, to preserve the individual liberties for which we have fought, and to save Europe from chaos or slavery, we must move with vigor, efficiency, and rapidity. Our financial and economic help to the peoples who are still resisting the stranglehold of totalitarian dictatorship would, in its practical results, be a thousand times more effective today than it would be tomorrow.

I believe that the announced policy of this Government is the policy most likely to prevent war and to enable the United Nations eventually to achieve the world authority which it must secure if world peace is to be maintained.

But such a policy cannot succeed unless the present method of conducting our foreign policy is drastically revised. The Soviet government is counting not only upon an anticipated economic collapse, but also quite as much upon the inherent weakness of our democratic form of Government in a moment of crisis—the delays and uncertainties caused by our political system.

THE ISSUES at stake are now as grave in their implications as the issues we faced during the war years. This Government cannot surmount the dangers of the moment unless a far closer cooperative working arrangement betweeen the Executive and the responsible leaders of both parties in the Congress can be created. It cannot overcome them unless a bipartisan and national policy can be swiftly implemented in accordance with plans that have previously been blueprinted in full detail.

The London Economist did well to remind us the other day that "what made Hitler strong was not any great accumulation of resources, but the flabbiness of the democracies;" and that "the answer to the riddle of Russia's strength is to be found in Washington."

Meat For The Lawyers

THE FLOOD of comment on the labor bill has been in terms of (1) politics and (2) the changes which it will, or will not, bring about in our system of industrial relations over a period of years. It would be well to consider for a moment what will happen during the next two years.

Childs

The first prospect is for a test in the courts. We sometimes forget that we have a third coordinate branch of our Government. Harsh and cynical critics have called the Supreme Court a House of Lords which has power to veto or ratify legislation approved by Congress.

Organized labor is certain to challenge the provisions of the new law in Federal Court. The machinery of the law courts grinds slowly and the Supreme Court is not likely to hand down a decision before two years from the present date.

That means two years of comparative uncertainty while the enlarged National Labor Relations Board is trying to administer a complicated new law. The members of the board will naturally learn a great deal in the next few months about the workability of the law. Presumably they should be able to go to reasonable men on Capitol Hill—men such as Senator Irving M. Ives of New York—to report what they have discovered and then to make the necessary changes.

BUT NEXT year is a presidential election year. In the political football game of '48, labor legislation will be one of the issues to be kicked around. Neither side—the Democrats in the executive branch nor the Republicans in Congress—will be able to make any concessions to reason and workability.

A great deal has been said about who will benefit by the new measure. "Slave labor," says the AFL in tones of anguish paid for at the full advertising rate. A charter of freedom for the workingman, says Senator Robert A. Taft in solemn self-congratulation.

There is one group, however, that will benefit beyond a shadow of a doubt—those are the lawyers. A vast new realm of law has been created and battalions of lawyers will be required to interpret it.

The fact is that, in conference between Senate and House, a lot of the so-called moderation was taken out of the measure adopted by the Senate. This was done in part by complicating the legal machinery. A good case for a veto can be made on the cumbersomeness of the bill sent to the President for his approval or disapproval.

One of the most experienced men in the labor-relations field, whose position has been moderate and who has suffered under attacks from the unions, made a careful study of the effects of the bill. He concluded that the functions of the Labor Board are so weighted down with new legal restrictions that labor might prefer to strike rather than resort to such circuitous and difficult procedure.

ONE OF the the curious things the new bill does is to create an independent "general counsel," to be appointed by the President. This general counsel has "final authority" over the investigation of charges and the issuance of complaints. This man can become a czar over all labor, if he chooses, since he can decide what cases should and what cases should not be heard by the board. There is no appeal from his decision either to the board or to the courts.

In a variety of ways, the bill puts new hedges around the collective bargaining process. Most of them apply only to employes. Some apply to employers as well. These are in many instances so technical that only lawyers specializing in the labor field will comprehend what they do.

In the last analysis, you can say that the leaders of organized labor are to blame for what is about to happen to them. Their foolish, unyielding, ostrich-like attitude has brought the omnibus bill. If they had been able to agree on certain minimum steps to correct flagrant abuses, Congress would in all likelihood have adopted a less complicated and restrictive measure.

The proof of the cake will be in the eating of it. One test will be the degree of industrial peace which follows. Let no one suppose that it is a magic wand waved over the industrial battlefront. The Labor Board, including its regional offices, has 5500 pending cases under the present law, more than 500 waiting final decision by the board in Washington. Under the complicated new law, we may see even more industrial strife than we have had in recent months. There is no final formula in law that will guarantee peaceful collective bargaining.

Matter Of Fact

The Plans Take Shape

THE GENERAL shape of a great program, comprehensive in scope and bold in design, for dealing with the economic and political crisis in Europe, is already becoming clear. The details of the program are by no means crystallized in the minds of the planners and technicians who, under the general direction of George Kennan, are charged with formulating it. Yet the program's broad objective—to revive Europe's faith in the European future by helping the Europeans to help themselves—is now firmly established.

It is hoped that this end may be achieved through the medium of two agencies, one European and the other American. If present plans come to a head—always a big if—these two agencies will do together for European reconstruction a job similar to that done for the American war effort by the War Production Board.

The European agency, a joint effort of all the countries participating in the program, will establish the goals which must be met if the people of Europe are to have full bellies and a fire in the grate. These goals will be announced in terms of the things the people need to maintain life—housing, clothing, shoes, food. Working with the American agency, the European agency will study the resources available in Europe itself to achieve these goals, and will decide how the competing needs of the participating countries can best be reconciled. The American agency will then underwrite the gap between what Europe needs to live and what Europe can itself produce, until the wrecked European economies are again back on their feet.

Obviously the American agency—whether independent or under the aegis of the State Department—will, under these conditions, have very great authority. First, it will be charged with allocating, when and where it seems most needed, the great dollar credit—probably as much as six billion dollars annually—which will be needed to underwrite the European effort. Second, it will grant priorities for American goods essential to European reconstruction which are in short supply here. "It is not the dollars that are needed in Europe," as one State Department technician remarked, "but the bulldozers and wheat and sheet steel which the dollars can buy." As American production gains volume, the supply problem will become less acute. Yet like the War Production Board, the American agency must have authority not only abroad but at home.

NO ONE could be more conscious than the planners that this daring conception of a program for dealing with the terrible crisis in Europe is no more than an ideal. They recognize clearly that there are a number of immensely high hurdles to be leaped before anything of the kind can even be approached.

As Secretary Marshall indicated at Harvard, the initiative must come from Europe. Yet in the neurotic political atmosphere of Europe today, it will take political courage of the first order to give the lead. Men like Premier de Gasperi and Premier Ramadier are far from certain that the American Congress will indorse Secretary Marshall's policy. But they are entirely certain that if they respond to Secretary Marshall's invitation, the Communists will intensify the effort which they have already launched, to wreck the western European economies by such devices as the French rail strike. Accordingly, if the nettle is to be grasped at all, it must be grasped by the British.

Again, ideas on the organization of the European efforts are admittedly vague. A possible instrumentality already exists in the form of the United Nations Economic Council for Europe. There would be obvious advantages in using that instrumentality. The open and final split between East and West which the European leaders, including the British, still deeply fear, would be sidestepped. The pull of the economies of the Soviet-dominated Eastern states toward Western Europe would be reinforced. Such essential resources as Polish coal could be included in the plan. Against these advantages, however, must be balanced the certainty that the Soviets would make a determined effort to sabotage the program; there is already evidence that Russia joined the Economic Council for Europe only in order to wreck it.

FINALLY, there is the American Congress. If it were to succeed, the program could not be penny-pinching. Moreover, Congress has never grasped the enormous magnetism which Western Europe exercises on the Eastern European economies. It will be hard enough in any event to persuade Congress to face the facts of our situation. But if any of the American investment in European recovery is to go to such Soviet-dominated countries as Poland and Czechoslovakia, congressional cries of pain and rage will certainly be long and loud.

Congress, and the American people, have by no means recovered from the postwar back-to-normalcy spasm. Yet it is possible that events of the coming months will provide a kind of shock treatment. Communist success in either France or Italy would be an unmitigated disaster for the United States; and only the most determined effort by the United States can avert such a disaster. The program now being threshed out in the State Department calls for such an effort; an effort, neither too little nor too late, to give Europe a hope in its own future to balance off against the bleak Communist alternative. Whether or not the effort will be made depends at the last on the American people themselves.

Employment Rise During May Discounts Talk of Recession

By The Associated Press

Government analysts who had forecast a recession did some cheerful hedging yesterday as the Census Bureau reported that civilian employment rose to an all-time high of 58,330,000 in May.

This development, along with reports that retail sales are holding up better than generally expected, has considerably brightened the economic picture, officials said.

With civilian employment eclipsing even the war years, the total number of Americans in paying jobs went to 59,800,000, including 1,470,000 in the armed forces.

Topped Only Twice

That total has been topped only in the July-August periods of 1945 and 1946, when the strength of the armed forces was much higher and the peak summer employment season was on.

The number of civilians with jobs in May represented a gain of approximately 1,500,000 over the previous month.

The seasonal upswing in farm work accounted for one million of the rise, but the 500,000 gain in nonfarm work loomed as far more significant in the eyes of Government economic analysts.

Industrial employment had dropped in April for the first time since the postwar business boom got under way and many had regarded that as signalling the start of a downgrade.

Unemployment Declines

Some officials greeted the upward rebound in May as evidence that pronouncements on the arrival of a recession were at least premature.

The upturn in employment was accompanied by a 450,000 decline in unemployment during May, dropping the number vainly hunting jobs to a little under two million. That was 350,000 below the unemployment total of May a year ago.

One reason employment expanded more than three times as much as unemployment shrank was the entry of seasonal workers, including farm women, into the labor force.

Republican Strategists Setting Tax Trap for Truman

By Drew Pearson

HERE IS the inside strategy Republican leaders in Congress have already cooked up if President Truman vetoes the tax bill—as he is sure to do.

Late last week, House Republican leaders were tipped off by White House contacts that the President would veto the tax bill, with a message announcing that he would call a special session of Congress in the fall for the purpose of drafting another tax bill giving help to low-bracket taxpayers, but none to the high brackets.

Following this advice, certain key leaders of the House GOP Steering Committee and the Ways and Means Committee held a secret meeting, at which the following strategy was devised:

1. Knowing that they do not have the votes to override a Truman veto—and thus pass the tax bill over the President's head—the GOP leaders decided to make no concerted fight for an override.

2. The House GOP leadership may sit tight and not even offer a motion to override. In fact, if such a motion is offered, a group of Republicans led by Representative Clarence Brown of Ohio will actually vote to sustain the President to further insure the death of their own tax bill.

3. But here is the payoff. If a special session is called in the fall, the House Republican leaders plan to pass another tax bill, identical with the one now before the President.

Purpose of this strategy is to force Truman to veto the same bill twice.

The GOP leaders feel it would make excellent campaign material in next year's elections if they can dramatize the fact that President Truman rejected a tax-reduction bill not once, but twice.

Truman's Kiss of Death

SHORTLY BEFORE President Truman fired him, Assistant Secretary of State Spruille Braden was discussing Argentine affairs at the White House, at which time the President said:

"Spruille, I want you to know that I'm 100 per cent behind you. I'll back you all the way."

Elated, Braden went back to the State Department. There a friend remarked:

"That's exactly what Truman said to Henry Wallace the day before he fired him. He told Henry that he would back him all the way, too. Next day Wallace was out."

Henry Morgenthau's friends tell the same story. After Roosevelt died, Henry Morgenthau offered to resign as Secretary of the Treasury, but Truman insisted that he remain. In fact, the week before Truman left for Potsdam he summoned Morgenthau to the White House, clasped his hand and said:

"Henry, when I took this job, I didn't know you very well. But since I've worked with you, I've begun to feel like a brother toward you. And I want you to feel like a brother toward me."

Exactly eight days later, and without prior warning, Truman sent his hatchet man, Sam Rosenman, around to see Morgenthau; handed him his walking papers.

Republicans Get Tough

SENATOR TAFT and cohorts suddenly have got tough regarding the gentlemanly practice of "pairing." This is a time-honored system whereby an absent Democratic Senator can offset his absence by "pairing" with a Republican Senator or vice versa. Thus one "no" vote counteracts a "yea" vote.

When the Democratic move to postpone action on taxes came up, however, some interesting backstage byplay took place regarding this parliamentary etiquette.

Senator John Overton, Louisiana Democrat, twice telegraphed from Arizona where he is resting for his health, requesting a "pair" with his close Republican friend, Guy Cordon of Oregon, later with Ed Robertson of Wyoming. Both replied: "Sorry."

Hospitalized Democratic Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee also asked his secretary, W. R. Davidson, to find a pair. Davidson tried bulking, genial Arthur Vandenberg.

"I'll be glad to pair with McKellar," agreed the Senator from Michigan, "if Millikin will release me."

Davidson carried the message to influential Senator Millikin of Colorado.

"I would like to do it," Millikin shrugged, "but the vote is too close. This is one bird we can't let get away."

Afterward Millikin admitted an advance agreement had been reached with Taft against granting pairs. But he said it applied only to the one issue. Apparently Majority Leader White of Maine had not heard of the decision for he said he tried to find a pair for McKellar without success.

"I sometimes miss those policy meetings because the (tobacco) smoke gives me hay fever," White explained later.

"That doesn't mean," he hastened to add, "that I approve of Senators being absent without reason. I am an old woman on the subject."

GOP tactics particularly rankled Illinois' Scott Lucas who rose on the Senate floor to denounce Republican disregard for courtesy and tradition.

When the tax-postponement vote finally came, Senator Warren Magnuson, Democrat, of Washington, turned the other cheek, declined to vote, announcing that he had agreed to pair with absent Republican Joe McCarthy of Wisconsin.

Maritime Labor Trouble

PRESIDENT PHIL Murray has stepped in to settle a raging feud between East Coast Maritime Labor Boss Joe Curran and West Coast Longshoremen Leader Harry Bridges which threatens to blow CIO maritime unity sky-high.

This was the reason behind a secret meeting Murray held in New York yesterday at which Curran and his right-hand man, Hoyt Haddock, secretary of the CIO National Maritime Committee, gave their side of the tiff with Bridges.

The tempest started over Bridges' efforts to replace Haddock with a personal stooge in Washington NMC headquarters. However, the real issue goes much deeper and involves a long-standing row between Curran and Bridges for top control of CIO maritime labor.

Curran told Murray that Bridges was using the Haddock issue to stir up internal dissension during contract negotiations with shipowners when, Curran contended, the maritime unions should be pulling together, not apart.

Note — Murray, who once threatened to toss Bridges out of the CIO for troublemaking, is most anxious to avoid trouble on the verge of a threatened shipping strike and with labor legislation pending.

Dogs Favored As Pets, Post Poll Shows

When it comes to chosing a pet, Washingtonians vote more than two to one for dogs, according to the latest Post Poll.

In 18 per cent of the homes in the Washington area, man's best friend makes with the tail wagging, and come bedtime some 56,000 local residents either walk their dogs or take a chance on their sense of responsibility.

But only about 25,000 pussies lap up the milk in 8 per cent of Washington homes, and render back-fence concerts when given a chance.

All told, almost one of every three Washington families has some pet, whether dog, cat, bird, fish, or turtle.

Post Pollers learned these vital statistics about the animal population in Washington by asking a representative cross-section of residents in the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia:

"Do you keep any pets?" (If "Yes") "Which?"

Here are their answers:

	Total	Home Owners	Renters
Have a pet	32%	37%	28%
Dog	18	24	15
Cat	9	11	8
Bird	3	2	3
Fish or turtle	2	*	2
Have no pet	18	63	72

*Less than 1 per cent

Home owners more often have pets than renters, perhaps because landlords can't be sold on the idea that the dog is the landlord's best friend. Cats are more often found in wealthier homes. Fourteen per cent of families with incomes over $5000 a year have a pampered pussy, as compared with 6 per cent of families with incomes below this figure.

It is also true that cats are preferred more often by older people.

Birds, fish and turtles are in the minority among Washington pets. One person in the sample kept a possum.

The Gallup Poll

Sentiment Found About 50-50 On U. S. Broadcasts to Russia

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., June 10.—Public sentiment is about evenly divided on the question of whether the State Department's radio broadcasts to Russia should be continued.

GALLUP

Because there has been some criticism of the project in Congress, the Institute put the issue before the American people in a coast-to-coast poll as follows:

"Do you think our Government should spend money for radio broadcasts to the Russian people—giving them an honest picture of America and of our Government's policies?"

The vote:

Yes, it should	43%
No, it shouldn't	46
No opinion	11

Each voter who gave an opinion was asked what reasons lay back of his opinion.

Those in favor of the radio broadcasts said the programs would help give the Russians a better understanding of our form of government and of how we live in America, and would promote better relations between the two nations.

Those against the project cite two reasons for their opposition: (1) a waste of money that could be used for better purposes, (2) the Russians probably don't listen anyway—or wouldn't be allowed to listen.

THE SURVEY finds that attitudes toward the broadcast vary considerably according to degree of education.

	Yes	No	No Opin.
College	62%	34%	4%
High School	48	43	9
Grade or No School	35	51	14

THE STATE Department's whole program of "Voice of America" overseas broadcasts was publicly backed by General Dwight D. Eisenhower at committee hearings in Congress May 20. Representative Karl E. Mundt (R., S. Dak.) has introduced a bill which would sanction continuing the State Department's current informational and cultural program.

Last week a citizens' group, headed by Ralph McGill, editor of The Atlanta Constitution, was formed to support the legislation.

McGrath Blocks Bill To Finance WCTU

By The Associated Press

Passage of legislation to give the Women's Christian Temperance Union $5000 to help pay for its international convention was blocked yesterday by Senator McGrath (D., R. I.).

Senator Capper (R., Kans.) had asked unanimous consent to suspend Senate business temporarily to pass the bill, already approved by the House. McGrath objected, and the effort was defeated.

Capper said early passage is necessary because the WCTU's seventeenth triennial convention is to be held in this country this month.

HELD FOR GRAND JURY—Daniel Williams (right), disbarred Mississippi attorney, is handcuffed to a United States marshal. Williams was held yesterday for grand jury action in the courthouse slayings May 16

CECIL A. CLAIG
Testifies at Inquest

Coroner Jury Hears Story Of Gun Battle

Daniel Williams, disbarred Mississippi lawyer, who shot four men, two fatally, in a downtown shooting affray May 16, later told police he fired at two of the men because he thought they had guns, a policeman testified yesterday.

The testimony was given during a coroner's inquest in the deaths of Ray E. Devendorf, 65, a clerk in the office of the Municipal Court's Committee on Admissions and Grievances, and Pvt. Hubert W. Estes, 51, First Precinct policeman. Williams was named responsible for both deaths and ordered held for the grand jury.

Wounded in the affray, which began in Municipal Court and ended at 6th and F sts. nw., were George W. Dalzell, 69, secretary of the committee, and Cecil A. Claig, 43, a civil guard at the court.

Williams' statement of believing two of the men had guns was related by Pvt. Gene R. Allen of the Eleventh Precinct. He said Williams made the statement voluntarily to him at Gallinger Hospital.

After telling of coming to Washington, posting $125 with his application for admittance to the District Bar, and being refused a refund by Dalzell when he learned the application was not necessary, Williams related the following story, Allen said:

"He told me he took the gun with him that morning, because Dalzell was always so nasty that he was expecting trouble. He said after he asked Dalzell for the money, Dalzell reached into his coat pocket as he got up from the desk. He said he thought Dalzell had a gun, so he shot him.

"When he walked around the filing cabinets, he saw Devendorf reach in the desk drawer, then come at him, so he shot again, he told me. He stated that Estes shot at him before he fired at the policeman.

When Harry M. Browning, a contractor, of 607 6th st. nw., and witness to part of the shootings, testified he could identify the prisoner only as a Negro with a mouth full of gold teeth, Williams [illegible] obligingly to show his gold teeth.

He joined the courtroom in loud laughter when John M. Emil of 5800 Euclid st. nw., who was working on a scaffold nearby the scene of the shooting at 6th and F sts. nw., told how he "climbed up on the roof and laid down" to avoid the whizzing bullets.

Williams at first declined to take the stand, but changed his mind, declaring "I want to make sure the jury understands that I was admitted to practice before the Supreme Court in 1936, which means I could practice before any inferior tribunal." He did not refer to the shootings.

Dalzell is still in Emergency Hospital and did not attend the inquest to give his version of the shooting in Municipal Court.

POST WANT ADS PAY

Soviet Building Hate for U. S., Ad Club Told

Pessimism over the prospect of finding a genuine basis of cooperation between Soviet Russia and the United States was expressed yesterday by Post Reporter Ferdinand Kuhn, jr., at a luncheon of the Advertising Club of Washington.

Kuhn told Ad Club members of the impressions he had received in Moscow during his assignment to cover the Conference of Foreign Ministers.

While Soviet Russia has no advertising, Kuhn commented, it does have copywriters. Instead of writing radio commercials or newspaper or magazine ads, these copywriters are busily engaged in grinding out propaganda, he said.

Soviet propaganda paints the United States as imperialistic, rapacious and greedy, filling Russians with fear and in time, with hate, Kuhn said.

Just as 20 years of Mussolini's propaganda and 10 years of Hitler's had left a lasting effect on the Italian and German people, so the stream of Soviet propaganda cannot fail to affect its listeners, he said.

Counter-propaganda by deeds rather than words was the speaker's suggested solution. By making our own system work better so as to leave no justification of fact for the Soviet exaggerations, and particularly by helping to reconstruct western Europe, we can win this battle for men's minds, Kuhn declared.

The "very hard times" which Moscow is undergoing was explained by Kuhn as a reason for the Soviet attitude toward German reparations.

General Grant, chairman of the National Capital Parks and Planning Commission, said his commission has a staff of 16 and a budget of $55,000. The budget for the coming year may be increased to Both Mitchell and Walter M. Phillips, president of the Citizens Council on City Planning of Philadelphia, discussed community planning at the annual meeting of the Citizens Council for Community Planning at the Washington Hotel. General Grant was chairman of the speaker's program.

Wage Talk Slated June 16 by A, B&W

A second wage conference between operators of the Alexandria, Barcroft & Washington Transit Co. and company officials has been scheduled for June 16.

Notice of the conference was submitted to Gov. William M. Tuck by R. Walter Scott, president of the Alexandria local of the Amalgamated Association of Street Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America, under terms of Virginia labor legislation requiring formal notification of wage negotiations.

Although an earlier conference ended in a deadlock, a company spokesman said the negotiations are "routine meetings which occur annually prior to renewal of company-union contracts."

Wheat Crop Expected to Top '46 by Quarter Billion Bushels

admitted that this year's "prospect for another big crop year now depends largely on corn."

"Untimely weather," it said, "has been hampering spring plantings over large areas."

"Much of the corn that had already been planted was not yet above the ground, and fields that were up were not damaged seriously," it added, however.

Milk Output Continues High

Milk production, the report says, "continues at a high level, only slightly lower than the May, 1945, record high production."

Local crops were reported as follows:

APPLES: "For the South Atlantic region as a whole production is indicated to be less than half of last year's total and probably not much greater than the short 1945 crop. Much depends on the June drop.

"June 1 prospects were best in North Carolina and poorest in Delaware and Virginia.

Peaches: "Virginia peaches suffered serious frost damage early in May though not so severe as apples. Production is estimated at 37 per cent less than the large 1946 crop.

"Delaware and Maryland expect short crops because of May freeze damage."

Other national forecasts included:

Rye: 25,208,000 bushels compared with 18,685,000 last year and the 10-year average of 37,934,000.

Barley: 268,319,000 bushels compared wih 263,350,000 last year and the 10-year average of 289,598,000.

Oats: 1,247,333,000 bushels compared with 1,509,867,000 last year and the 10-year average of 1,129,441,000.

Peaches: 89,183,000 bushels compared with 86,643,000 last year and 62,936,000 for the 10-year average.

Pears—33,753,000 bushels compared with 34,447,000 last year and 29,510,000 for the 10-year average.

Cherries—200,000 tons compared with 230,000 last year and 159,000 for the 10-year average.

Egg production in May was reported at 6,146,000,000 compared with 6,328,000,000 in April, with 6,292,000,000 in May last year and 5,428,000,000 for the 10-year May average.

World Bank Moves to Help Increase Polish Coal Output

partment, and Samuel Lipkowitz, a commodity expert from its research department.

Although the Polish loan application seeks a thoroughgoing reconstruction of Poland's agriculture, transport and manufacturing as well as coal mining, it places great emphasis upon Silesian coal. Coal is, and will be, Poland's greatest asset and her chief means of repaying any loan the Bank may see fit to grant.

The Silesian mines already are exporting at a rate of about 15 million tons a year, more than half of it to the coal-starved nations of western Europe. The Poles contend that with new mining equipment and with new locomotives and coal cars, they can export far more and help substantially to meet Europe's coal shortage.

The Bank has not committed itself, but at least has felt it worthwhile to send a mission to get the facts. In spite of the fact that Poland is in the Soviet orbit in Europe, the United States Government, through its director on the Bank's board, might look favorably on a Polish loan if it could help to step up Polish coal exports.

At present European countries are compelled to import American coal at a rate of 30 million tons a year, and at uneconomic prices, because they cannot get enough from the only major sources of coal in Europe; Silesia, and Ruhr and Great Britain.

The World Bank's mission to Poland is thus seen here as a step in the program of European reconstruction which Secretary Marshall outlined at Harvard last week.

Charter Limitation

Under its charter the World Bank is limited to loans which have a sound business basis and can be repaid. It may be that the World Bank will find a part, at least, of Poland's 600 million dollar application to be in the category of sound banking business.

Informed American officials now realize that most of Europe's present and future needs cannot be met by the World Bank, in view of the strict business limitations on the loans the Bank can make. But whatever the Bank can do will lighten, by just so much, the coming load on the United States.

For this reason, among others, American officials will be watching with interest and hope to see what the World Bank's mission discovers in Poland and what the Bank eventually may decide to do.

The Bank's president, John J. McCloy, announced yesterday that the first 25 million dollars of the 250-million-dollar loan to France had been made available Monday. He said France would use this money to buy coal, oil and nonferrous metals for use in its reconstruction program.

He expressed the hope that the Bank would offer its first securities to American investors "some time around the middle of July." About 250 million dollars' worth would be offered for sale, he said, in 10-year and 25-year debentures.

Senate Backs 5 Nominations

By The Associated Press

The Senate yesterday rushed through confirmation of five presidential nominations covering American diplomatic and economic activities on far-flung global fronts.

Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.), chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, sped the nominations through without opposition, telling his colleagues they required "immediate attention."

The list:

1. Dwight D. Griswold, 53, former three-time Republican Governor of Nebraska, as chief of the Greek phase of the 400 million dollor Greek-Turkish aid program to stem communism.

2. Norman Armour, 59, one of the Nation's most widely experienced diplomats, as Assistant Secretary of State, his task to unify the State Department's political affairs in all parts of the world.

3. Richard F. Allen, 56, vice chairman of the American Red Cross, as field director of the 350 million dollar foreign relief program for needy countries.

4. Emmett O'Neil, 60, former Democratic Representative from Kentucky, as United States Ambassador to the new Philippine Republic, succeeding Paul V. McNutt.

5. Monnett B. Davis, 53, American consul general in Shanghai, as United States representative to the Economic Council of Asia and the Far East, which meets in Shanghai June 16.

If You Work for a Living...
ACT NOW!
WIRE President Truman!

Right NOW, on the desk of President Truman, lies the Taft-Hartley Bill. Its sponsors—Senator Taft and Representative Hartley—call it a "mild" measure which does not deprive labor of any basic rights. That statement is just as full of deception as the Taft-Hartley Bill itself.

Here is THE TRUTH!

1 The Taft-Hartley Bill would destroy the basis of 50,000 labor-management contracts now in existence, covering some six million workers.

2 It would make it impossible for unions to sign any new contracts with management to assure stable industrial relations, because the bill nullifies union security.

3 It would kill the whole purpose and intent of the Wagner Act, labor's Magna Carta, because it would permit recalcitrant employers to discharge their full obligation under the law by saying "No" and keep on saying "No" to any and all union proposals on wages and working conditions.

4 Under the Taft-Hartley Bill the dummy "company union", which was outlawed by the Wagner Act, would be restored to full legality, thus encouraging certain employers to fight unions.

5 It revives the hated doctrine of conspiracy against unions by depriving workers of their right to strike in concert for a number of legitimate objectives while permitting workers to quit their jobs individually. This is typical of the tricky deception with which the bill was framed because, as everyone knows, a strike cannot be effective unless the workers strike together.

6 It restores "Government by Injunction", subjecting workers to court decrees compelling them to work even against their will for private employers. This nullifies the Norris-La Guardia Act.

7 It permits damage suits in the Federal Courts against unions, thus arming labor-hating employers with a weapon to harrass unions to death.

8 For the first time in the history of America, the Taft-Hartley Bill sets up rigid regimentation and control by a Federal bureaucracy of labor-management relations and union activities.

9 Here's a typical example of deception—cheap deception! In conference, the definition of an "employer" under the bill was changed to exclude Federal Reserve Banks from being considered employers, thus depriving thousands of workers in these privately owned banks of the right to join a union to improve their conditions.

10 In sum, the Taft-Hartley Bill so drastically weakens and impairs the status of labor organizations and so tightly restricts their activities as to make it impossible for them to protect wage standards—a calamity which is bound to lead to a Taft-Hartley depression.

Dr. M. L. Dicus Quits Board Of Optometry After 23 Years

Dr. M. Luther Dicus, Washington and Arlington ouptometrist for 35 years, last night ended 23 years as an officer of the D. C. Board of Optometry, "to devote my time to private practice in Arlington."

Dicus

The doctor was appointed to the D. C. board in 1924. served two years as vice president, 20 as secretary-treasurer, and the past year as president.

At 60, he leaves behind him a long crusade against cut-rate advertising by optometric stores, and the sale of glasses in dime stores.

The cut-rate prices for eyeglasses offered by some stores are "bait, pure and simple," Dicus thinks.

"They don't sell them at the advertised rate," he points out. "When you come in for glasses, they tell you you need a special pair at over the advertised rate."

Dicus, who has served seven years as vice president of the American Optometric Association, has sought legislation on Capitol Hill to end such practices.

The dime store glasses have two dangerous drawbacks, he says. First, "people shouldn't risk their eyesight by fitting their own glasses," and just as bad, "glasses on a public counter handled and fitted by many people are insanitary."

"But we haven't been able to touch the practice," he says, and local residents "are still not adequately glassed."

Biggest advance during his 35 years in the field is the "more adequate training now demanded of optometrists. Another gain is "vocational prescription," by which a man's glasses are fitted to his job needs.

"Take a cashier in a cafeteria line," he says. "He may need good vision to spot trays under his nose, close by, and far down the line. We might fit him with the proper kind of trifocals."

In his Arlington offices he has gadgets to eliminate "tunnel vision," crossed eyes, and to strengthen eye muscles with "eye calisthentics."

Like all true professionals, Dicus thinks of his work as creative and artistic.

"A man can give vent to all of his artistic feelings in the care of the eyes," he says.

Veto it, Mr. President!

Dear Mr. President:

This is a letter from "The Cross Roads of America"—Richland County, Ohio. Publication of this letter is made possible through contributions from farmers, workingmen, businessmen and professional people, clergymen and other citizens. We are writing to you bcause you have an opportunity to avert a great injustice.

That injustice is the Taft-Hartley Bill. Senator Taft has declared he has a mandate from the people of Ohio to cut down the power of labor—but we assure you he has no mandate for the kind of bill which he has sponsored, and which is now before you for signature.

For the Taft-Hartley Bill, under the pretext of eliminating certain abuses, is directed at the very existence of free labor organization itself. Let us cite just a few of the many ways in which the bill opens the way for weakening and destroying labor organizations:

WHAT THE BILL PROVIDES

It permits breaking up the unions in mass-production industries into small units representing little groups of the workers. (Section 9b). This would not only atomize the bargaining power of the workers while the bargaining power of great corporations remains intact—it would also make collective bargaining virtually impossible.

While on its face the bill does not permit private employers to get injunctions against labor unions—a condition which created so much abuse and bitterness that in 1932 Congress moved to wipe it out through the Norris-LaGuardia Act. But Section 10 of the Taft-Hartley measure authorizes the National Labor Relations Board to get such injunctions upon the application of private employers!

Title III of the Taft-Hartley Bill makes it possible for unscrupulous employers to drain the treasuries which unions have built up through their members' contributions. How? By making a union liable for action by any of its agents, even if such action was neither authorized nor approved by the union.

The records of the Senate Civil Liberties Committee are full of instances where employers hired spies and provocateurs to cause violence and disturbances involving unions. The Taft-Hartley Bill invites recurrence of such episodes, with the added incentive to a certain type of employer that through such methods he can legally wipe out the union of his workers!

Section 10 of the law permits employers to sue unions for so-called unfair practices, such as jurisdictional strikes and secondary boycotts. But the law does not permit unions to sue employers guilty of unfair labor practices.

Abraham Lincoln said, "I am glad that I live under a system under which men have the right to strike." Messrs. Taft and Hartley do not share that great Republican's philosophy. Sec. 8 and Title II of their bill so restrict that basic right of American workers as to make it meaningless.

And Mr. President, we call your attention to the provisions in Section 304, Title III, which seriously abridge the political rights and freedom of American workers.

Under the guise of "equal treatment", unions as well as corporations and bankers are forbidden to make expenditures for political action. The records of Congressional Campaign Expenditures Committees amply document expenditures for political action by owners or executives of corporations and banks as individuals.

But union officers and members do not enjoy the salaries and bonuses which make such expenditures possible by them as individuals. Labor's only way of getting funds for political action is through pooling the contributions of its members.

If this means is closed, the functioning of labor in our political life will be severely restricted. No doubt this is exactly what certain elements want—but we are sure you will agree with us that such restrictions will not serve the cause of American democracy.

CLASS LEGISLATION

In short, Mr. President, the Taft-Hartley Bill is class legislation at its worst. It not only confers great advantages on corporations whose wealth and power are already overwhelming, but it also makes our own Government an instrument to break down the rights of American workers.

In the name of good Americanism, Mr. President, we ask you to veto it.

And we ask you for a veto, not only because the bill is reprehensible to American principles, but also because it helps pave the way for economic disaster.

If unions are so weakened and destroyed that they can no longer protect wage standards, we can confidently expect widespread wage reductions, speed-up on the job, and layoffs of those workers unable to keep up the killing pace of non-union production lines.

This will cause a sharp reduction in purchasing power, with consequent sales slumps, bankruptcies and depression. We cannot afford that in America today!

WEAKENS AMERICA ABROAD

Finally, Mr. President, may we point out to you and to all Americans concerned with the good name of our country, that enactment of punitive and restrictive legislation against labor here will hardly increase our standing in the eyes of other peoples. They will judge us by what we do, not by what we say! And they know, as we all should know, that destruction of free labor is the first step toward fascism. Such a step in this country will surely impair our reputation abroad.

Mr. President, the Taft-Hartley Bill was conceived in a spirit of vengeance and was given birth in an atmosphere of hysteria. It is too serious, too dangerous to the welfare of all Americans, to become part of the law of our great country.

Abraham Lincoln said, "All that harms labor is treason to America."

We ask you to approach the Taft-Hartley Bill in the spirit of the Great Emancipator. We ask you to VETO THE TAFT-HARTLEY BILL!

Army's Need For Doctors Is Described

Atlantic City, N. J., June 10 (AP). Secretary of War Patterson said today there were only 1100 Regular Army doctors on duty today among the 10,000 medical officers now in service.

At a news conference after his address to the American Medical Association, Patterson set minimum requirements for the Regular Army as 3000 doctors with a minimum of another 3000 as reserves who could be called to duty or civilian officers who would be available for service.

He said that of the 10,000 medical officers, 5000 were officers on temporary duty who wanted to be released. The number of Regular Army doctors is 200 less than there were before the war, he said.

Seek Improvement

In his address Patterson said the War Department is determined to improve the professional status of its medical officers.

Patterson asked support of a bill in Congress aimed at this improvement.

He said main points of this legislation are:

1. Payment of $100 a month extra to all medical officers with less than 30 years service;

2. Payment of an increase of 25 per cent of base and longevity pay to officers designated specialists;

3. Establishment of positions for four chief consultants who would hold professorships in the Army Medical Center and Walter Reed Hospital in medicine, surgery, neuropsychiatry and preventive medicine with the assimilated rank of brigadier or major general;

4. Original appointments of outstanding specialists in higher grades and at later ages than now authorized;

5. Employment of civilian physicians in six grades, at $3640 to $9800 with 25 per cent extra, up to $11,000 a year, for specialists.

Radioactive cobalt, gold and tantalum—fabricated into "needles" and other forms for insertion into cancerous tissue, and having up to 10 times the penetrating power of radium—may become available for experimental use in humans in from six months to a year.

Dr. Stafford Warren of the University of California school of medicine told a reporter that such materials when ready for use would also be easier to handle and prepare than radium, and much cheaper.

Health Insurance Assailed

Atlantic City, N. J., June 10 (U.P.)—"Compulsory taxation cannot be termed insurance, nor can health be gained by Government decrees, Dr. Edward L. Bortz, Philadelphia, said tonight on his induction as president of the American Medical Association.

"The vast majority of physicians in this Nation is definitely committed to the democratic principle, and combats vigorously any attempts to regiment the members of the profession forcefully and to make them subservient to a bureaucracy," he said.

Pepco Planning to Begin Rate Refunds on July Bills

District electricity users may begin receiving refunds next month to cover rate adjustments for the past three years, Potomac Electric Power Co. revealed yesterday.

Charles L. Carr, assistant PEPCO comptroller, said the company would speed up the refund from September to August and would "begin applying credits to July bills" if possible.

Carr made the statement during a Public Utilities Commission public investigation of PEPCO finances for 1946. He told PUC the company's 1946 excess earnings were only $8131, an amount "too small to warrant further consideration."

Labor, Coal Costs Rising

Rising labor and coal costs are causing a downward trend in company earnings, he asserted, and PEPCO "may find it necessary in the very near future to petition for relief" in the form of higher rates.

PEPCO should be permitted immediately to discontinue earmarking funds for return to consumers as provided in PUC's 1944 rate reduction order, he maintained.

Chief PUC Accountant V. A. McElfresh agreed with Carr's excess earning figures but said an additional $4983 might be available in tax savings if the excess was refunded to consumers.

He termed the amount "very small," however, and said "it would be difficult to devise a rate schedule to absorb it."

Advocates Reserve Fund

It should be put in a reserve fund to forestall future rate increases, he said, or absorbed by reducing PEPCO's annual income an estimated $12,600 through changes in computing bills for consumers using power only part of a month.

He favored continuing until March 1, 1948, the company's present system of charging 1943 rates but setting certain amounts aside for ultimate consumer refunds.

H. G. Douglas of the Washington Central Labor Union (AFL) did not appear to testify, but his statement urging PUC investigation of PEPCO's non-competitive, cost-plus contracts with 100 per cent non-union companies" was read into the record.

$1000 Pay Cut Recommended For Friede

A recommendation for a $1000 slash in the annual salary of Herbert A. Friede, former superintendent of fire alarms, was made to the District Commissioners yesterday.

Both Highway Director H. C. Whitehurst and Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler recommended that Friede's present job of superintendent of communications be reclassified from P-5 at $6862 a year to P-4 at $1000 less a year.

Control of the District's fire alarm headquarters was transferred from Friede to Fire Chief Clement Murphy last winter by the Commissioners.

At the time the Commissioners told Captain Whitehurst and Fowler to study Friede's reduced responsibilities and recommend reclassification. His job is under the District Electrical Department.

Plan for Arts Center Here To Be Offered

Establishment of a creative arts center in Washington will be proposed at a meeting in St. John's Episcopal Church library at 8:30 p. m. tomorrow.

Preliminary plans, directed to persons in the field of music, painting, drama, dance and writing, call for incorporation of the Washington Arts Center Association, a nonprofit, educational and membership corporation.

An appeal to prospective supporters of the plan cited "the acute need of space of all local arts groups" and asserted such need can be solved "only by the united efforts of the entire community."

Immediate objective of the association, other than obtaining space, is to "bridge the gap between the artist and the community."

The long-range objective is to provide an instrument for the "establishment and maintenance of a creative arts center." Currently, the project is being pushed by the Washington Arts Committee, which will be dissolved upon incorporation of the association.

The committee is "committed to a program of organizing a community arts center, the policies of which will be administered democratically by Washington's art, music, drama, dance, radio and writing groups," the announcement said.

Woman Names Two Sailors As Attackers

A 24-year old Negro woman yesterday identified two sailors as the men who robbed and criminally attacked her in a stolen taxicab here last Christmas Eve.

The suspects, Elwood McMasters, jr., 19, and William A. Campbell, 22, both of the Dahlgren, Va., naval base, went on trial in District Court here yesterday.

Defense Counsel Charles Ford told the all-white, all-male jury his clients would prove they spent Christmas Eve at Washington night clubs and taverns and were innocent of the charges.

The sailors were indicted in February on rape charges, and on charges they participated in a three-day Christmas holiday crime wave involving five other alleged holdups. Detectives arrested them in a cab on the night of December 28.

The complainant in the rape case yesterday told the court her companion, James Jackson, 39 Quincy pl. ne., hailed a taxicab operated by the two sailors. Police say they had stolen it. Her escort, she said, was robbed at gunpoint of $14 and escaped after he was driven to his home "to get more money."

She testified Campbell then robbed her of $3 and raped her in the back seat of the taxicab while McMasters drove around the city streets.

The case is being tried by Associate Justice Richmond B. Keech, with Assistant United States District Attorney John P. Burke prosecuting.

Clayton Favors Wool Subsidy Over Tariff

By The Associated Press

Undersecretary of State Clayton said yesterday the Government should subsidize the wool industry if present tariffs do not offer enough protection.

Testifying before a subcommittee of the Senate Public Lands Committee, Clayton would not say whether present wool duties might be changed at the International Trade Conference at Geneva, which he has been attending.

"The (Geneva) negotiations are very delicate," he said. "I should not like to give our hand away."

Australia, he said, wants to avoid any increase in the price of its wool in the United States which might affect its competitive position with other wool or with synthetics.

Clayton said an escape clause would be included in each Geneva trade treaty permitting the President to withdraw tariff concessions to other countries if the U. S. tariff commission decided after a hearing that domestic industries were being hurt by the new rate.

For the past three years the Government has been buying all domestic wool. Legislation to continue that practice through 1948 and to permit sale of Government stocks at the market price has passed both houses of Congress.

The House added a provision for import fees at the President's discretion and the legislation is now before a conference committee to consider that provision.

Asked what treatment he would advise for wool, Clayton said:

"There's nothing wrong with the Senate bill. The tariff is now 63 per cent of the value of imported wool If the domestic industry needs more protection, it should be given as a subsidy."

Europe's Children Need Milk Urgently, Dr. Eliot Reports

Dr. Martha M. Eliot, associate chief of the Children's Bureau, yesterday reported that a six weeks' survey of devastated European countries convinced her that milk is the greatest need for European children today.

Dr. Eliot

Dr. Eliot, whose survey of seven countries was made at the request of the International Children's Emergency Fund, reported that at one Yugoslavian orphanage she had visited, the last supply of milk was received in January. Since then there had been only one small allotment of cheese—enough to give each child one small piece of cheese at one meal.

The Children's Bureau official said that in her opinion Poland has the greatest need for aid to its children. That country, she pointed out, has a million and a half orphan children to support.

Dr. Eliot said that persons interested in child welfare in Europe are convinced that the best method of raising their nturitional levels is by feeding them at least one good meal a day through organized school or health centers.

She reported that she got the impression that there was an increasing amount of tuberculosis among European children. She said doctors on the continent told her that there are more babies with tuberculosis meningitis in hospitals now than they have ever seen before. This situation, she said, reflects greatly increased amount of tuberculosis among adults.

Cardinal Fearful West Germany Might Turn Left

Frankfurt, June 10 (AP).—Josef Cardinal Frings, Archbishop of Cologne, said today the Communists might become the dominant party in western Germany "if there is another winter of cold and hunger."

The cardinal, preparing to take off for Newfoundland en route to an Ottawa, Canada, Catholic Congress, said that "one must not underestimate the Communist strength" in Germany.

"The Communists gained ground in the last British zone elections, especially at Essen in the Ruhr, and they are also influential in the trade union councils," he said. Another winter like the last one would find the German people going further left, and there would be no stopping the Socialist Unity Party (SED), through which the Communists are already in control in eastern Germany."

Senate Group Votes Cut In Veterans' Preference

VETERANS: A bill that would require a veteran to get at least a passing grade of 70 on a Civil Service exam before preference points could be added was given a favorable report yesterday by the Senate Civil Service Committee. The measure, sponsored by Senator Cain (R., Wash.), also provides:

Kluttz

That a veteran must have a service-connected disability of at least 10 per cent before he can be eligible for 10 points preference, and also,

That a veteran must have a service-connected disability of at least 30 per cent before he can be "floated" to the top of a Civil Service register and be given the first crack at a Federal job opening.

It's now possible for a disabled veteran to get a mark of 60 on an exam and be given a passing mark of 70 by adding the 10 preference points. Under the law, Civil Service must place him at the top of the register and he's given a chance for a job before either a non-veteran or an able veteran who receives a perfect mark of 100.

Senator O'Conor (D., Md.) who reported the bill, said it had the support of veterans groups, the Administration, and the Veterans Administration.

The committee also gave its approval to the Saltonstall bill to bring employes of the Columbia Institution for the Deaf and the National Library for the Blind under the Civil Service retirement system.

RETIREMENT: Chairman Langer of the Senate Civil Service Committee yesterday promised to push the Langer-Chavez-Stevenson retirement bill. He said the revised actuaries' report which scaled down the cost of the bill had convinced him the bill could be passed without substantial changes.

"We'll call it up on the Senate floor," he said, "and fight it out."

Senator Williams (R., Del.) has served notice that he'll make a motion to recommit the bill to the committee.

HOUSING: A Senate-House conference is reported to have agreed to allow the Office of the Housing Expediter to continue rent control. Also, to permit the OHE to carry on controls over construction for amusements and other non-essential building. However, the veterans' housing program would be killed for all practical purposes.

STORY: Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) said yesterday that "reliable persons" had hold him that War Assets had a "reading room or concentration camp" for idle employes here. He made his comment during a hearing before his expenditures subcommittee on surplus property disposal.

WAA officials flatly deny the charge. But Ferguson promises his subcommittee will investigate.

LOYALTY: The objective of the President's Federal employe loyalty program and the Rees loyalty bill was indorsed yesterday by spokesmen for the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and the Disabled American Veterans.

However, the Legion and the VFW disagreed over the protection Federal workers should be given. Harry Hayden of the Legion flatly approved the Rees bill. He said the Government should have the "right of reasonable doubt in all cases."

John C. Williamson of VFW warned that unless the loyalty investigations were administered with jealous regard to our Anglo-Saxon heritage of the common law it could "prove the opening wedge of our decline as a free people." He insisted employes should be proved disloyal before any reasonable doubt before they were ordered fired.

He also demanded that the list of subversive organizations to be prepared by the Attorney General under the President's plan be made public. The VFW leader pointed out that many people join groups without realizing they are Communist fronts.

PAY RAISES: The Navy has asked the War Department to join with it in making wage surveys of per diem employes. If War accepts, as expected, a uniform schedule of wages would be established for per diems in the services.

Navy already has revealed it will begin its surveys on July 1. Pay raises for a good many of its per diems are expected to be ordered since many employes in similar work in private industry have been given higher salaries in recent weeks. The law requires both services to pay "prevailing local rates."

LAYOFF: A new personnel reduction at Veterans' Administration is being planned, it was learned yesterday, in addition to the one now in progress.

VA yesterday revealed that 6100 jobs were to be wiped out on or before August 1 to get the agency within the 210,000 personnel ceiling fixed by the President. Less that 400 of the jobs are in this city. Also, normal turnover here and in the field will vacate some of the jobs to be abolished.

But the new lay-off—if it comes —will hit at VA's insurance activities here. A preliminary survey is said to show that from 500 to 1000 jobs could be eliminated by September 1 and that further reductions could be made in special services and contact offices. The insurance offices here have been expanding.

However, if the lay-off goes through it would be more than offset by the scheduled return here by September 1 of the insurance actuarial division now in New York which has more than 1500 employes.

The present reduction program has been under way since May 1. Offices here that either have or will be affected by it are: coordination and planning, finance, personnel, public relations, and construction and supply. Officials estimated that at least 100 employes due to get the 30-day notices would be given other assignments.

The 5700-job reduction in the field will be directed at 11 of the 13 branch offices. The remaining two offices will be allowed to make small increases because of heavy work loads.

New Birds, Reptiles Provide Pan American Flavor at Zoo

MEXICAN STORK—Jabiru stork, one of three zoo-comers, stretches its wings and makes like a toe-dancer after arriving here from our border neighbor, Mexico

It was Pan American day at the Zoo yesterday.

Installed as new residents were three jabiru storks from Mexico, a pair of king vultures from South America, two pairs of Guatemalan quetzal and a boxful of Mexican cottonmouth moccasins.

The storks, who'd have a hard time finding leg room in a silo, replace several who died at the Zoo years ago of old age. The new ones, this year's crop, have a long future ahead of them, according to Malcolm Davis, the Zoo's curator of birds.

Equally as young are the two king cultures. "If they were at home they'd probably be still hanging on the edge of the nest," Davis said.

The green, beautifully-plumed quetzal, national bird of Guatemala, join two others in the bird colony. Almost as large as a pigeon, the quetzal adorns Guatemalan stamps and money.

Their diet is no problem—in season. For lunch, for instance, they had about a dozen cherries each, daintily spitting out each seed. They also go for bananas, oranges, apples, blue berries, hard-boiled eggs and rice.

The cottonmouth snakes are no novelty to the reptile house and hadn't been uncrated for public viewing late yesterday.

McNeil

A native of Brownville, Me., McNeil came to Washington in 1910 and graduated from Georgetown U. law school in 1913. He was appointed assistant United States attorney in 1934 and resigned from that office in November, 1946. He is a partner of the law firm of Camalier, McDonald and McNeil.

The other newly elected officers are:

Wilbur L. Gray, first vice president; Roger Robb, second vice president; Kenneth N. Parkinson, secretary, and Lowry N. Coe, treasurer.

The three new directors elected to serve two-year terms were Edmund D. Campbell, Jacob N. Halper and South Trimble. Jerome F. Barnard, David G. Bress and Charles B. Murray, directors, were carried over from last year's elections.

The election of a director from the Junior Bar Association resulted in a tie between Sidney Sachs and Edward Beard, and the results of another vote by mail will be announced later this week.

Senate Group Clears Deck For D. C. Tax

Cain Due Back Today Plans to Seek Action On Measure This Week

Senate committee action will be sought this week on the District tax bill, Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) said yesterday.

Cain, chairman of the Senate District Fiscal Subcommittee, is expected back at the Capitol today.

He told The Post by phone from Nashville, Tenn., he will seek at once to arrange a meeting of his subcommittee to review the House-approved revenue program to hike District revenue between 12 and 13 million dollars a year.

Cain himself had indorsed the revenue-raising program that went to the House floor. He was not ready to comment on whether he would push in the Senate to restore the income tax extension plan which the House whittled down.

Cain had joined with Representative George J. Bates (R., Mass.), House District fiscal chairman, in backing an income tax extension that would make all persons living in Washington at least seven months in the year file an income tax return here. They would pay here unless they could show they had to pay a larger income or intangible property tax to a State.

The House shaved an estimated one to two million dollars in new revenue out of the Cain-Bates plan by exempting any Government employe who can show he has a legal domicile in another State.

Cain said the House, by avoiding other major changes in the revenue program, had taken a big step to provide the District with a plan that would balance the budget and take care of necessary operations.

As cleared by the House, the income tax plan extends the present 5 per cent corporate income tax as a franchise levy on unincorporated business income over $10,000. It also adds 25 cents to the present $1.75 per $100 property tax rate, boosts water rates 25 per cent, makes the gasoline tax 4 instead of 3 cents per gallon, and boosts the Federal payment four million dollars to a total of 12 million dollars.

Citizens Ask Retention of Public Counsel

Hugh C. DeFabio, president; George L. Gregg, vice president, and Mrs. Edward B. Morris, secretary, were reelected last night at the Randle Highland's Citizens Association meeting in the Orr School, 2d and Prout sts. se.

Joseph F. Foresi was elected the association's new treasurer.

The association also announced it was in favor of retaining the office of the people's counsel and indorsed a proposed request to the Secretaries of War and Navy to act on low-flying air traffic over Randle Heights.

Fort Dupont Citizens

Fort Dupont Citizens Association, which met last night in the Ryland Methodist Church, Branch and Pennsylvania aves. se., indorsed a resoltion of the Bradbury Heights Citizens Association protesting the proposed elimination of the office of people's counsel.

Fort Dupont Association, also named R. L. Sharp and Frank A. Curtis as delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Horan Asks For Delay Of Children's Home Here

Believes $311,000 Facility May Be Dropped; House Group Plans Study

House District Appropriations Chairman Walt Horan (R., Wash.) announced late yesterday he had asked the Commissioners to hold up a start on the new receiving home for children.

He said it was possible, but not likely, the receiving home program would be discarded. A $311,000 contract to John Tester & Son, Inc., was approved by the Commissioners last month. The home would be built at Mount Olivet rd. near Corcoran st. ne.

Horan said his subcommittee wanted more time to study the possibility of using present facilities for delinquent children and providing for nondelinquent children by expanding the city's foster home program.

The move was the latest step in a searching probe of the District welfare operations. Horan has voiced hope for some savings in welfare costs, while welfare officials are urging an increase in the 11-million-dollar welfare budget to take care of an expected increased relief load.

Horan said the receiving home question was discussed with welfare officials in an executive hearing. The subcommitee based questions on a suggestion from its staff investigators that the need for the proposed new receiving home had not been sufficiently established. Part of the same suggestion was that there should be a greater effort at foster home placement.

Montgomery Tax Increase Is Defended

Pleas for an increased tax rate in Montgomery County—if it means restoration of a $400,000 cut in Board of Education requests—highlighted the budget hearing in the Rockville Courthouse last night.

Representatives of 32 organizations and nine speakers urged a tax rate boost to handle the proposed budget of $5,696,711.57—about $60,000 more than last year. The tax increases would be from $1.50 to $1.88 per $100 of assessed valuation.

The fight for restoration of the $400,000 trimming brought out the largest budget hearing crowd in the counties' recent history.

The Board of Education's request was for $2,800,000, but the proposed budget cut it to $2,400,000.

Called on unexpectedly by Board of Commisisoner President Brook Johns, Dr. Edwin Broome, superintendent of schools, declared:

"We can afford to pay $2 out of every $100 for education. And we can begin now."

Johns recently advocated a $2.50 tax rate "for the services of health, welfare and education."

Maurice L. DuMars, assistant secretary of the Montgomery County Council of P-TA declared "the board proposals to put teachers as nearly on scale as possible represents a move toward justice. It will not, however, attempt to cover the amount of underpayment during the last decade."

Among those who spoke before the hearing were:

Mrs. C. M. Tipton, president of the Montgomery County Home Makers Club; L. M. Abbe, chairman of the county commissioners advisory committee on education; Mrs. Curtis Walker, president of the Board of Education; B. Z. Harding, Gaithersburg PTA; Donald Staley, president of the Silver Spring Board of Trade; Mrs. Minier Hostetler, Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. G. Beale Bloomer, chairman of education, League of Women Voters; Ralph Boyd, president of the Allied Civic Groups, Silver Spring; Nathan Gilbert, president of the Montgomery County Council, PTA.

The hearing went into the early morning hours today.

James King, president of the Montgomery County Farm Bureau, admitted the teachers were the county's poorest paid employes, but he said he believed an average $1000 increase was "adequate for the present."

Several civic leaders urged commissioners to restore a 20 per cent increase in salaries of public welfare employes. The State pays welfare salaries, but the county adds 20 per cent because of the heavy valume of county work.

Higher pay for policemen and retention of the police department's traffic bureau were urged. E. Duncan Clark, member of the Montgomery County delegation to the State Legislature, speaking as a citizen, asked a boost in police pay. Under the proposed budget, they will get a 10 per cent boost.

Woman Collapses At Dinner, Dies

Mrs. Alice B. Falk, about 54, of 4612 N. 37th st., Arlington, Va., collapsed while dining at the Club 823 in 15th st. nw. last night. She was taken to Gallinger Hospital where she was pronounced dead, apparently of natural causes, police said.

Miss Falk's sister-in-law, Mrs. Blanche Falk of 2737 Devonshire pl. nw., was with her at the time.

Four Families Lose Most of Possessions When Converted Barn-Apartments Burn

BATTLING BLAZE—Firemen on ladders and on a rooftop (right) fight to control the fire which last night drove four families from this one-time barn, which they had converted into living quarters, at the Blue Plains, D. C., Home for the Aged and Infirm. Cause of blaze was undetermined

Families of Employes At Home for Aged Stand Helplessly By Four families last night lost their living quarters and virtually all their personal belongings in a fire at Blue Plains, D. C. They had improvised apartments in a one-time barn at the District's Home for Aged and Infirm, in Southeast Washington.

The fire, of undetermined origin, routed 12 occupants, including four women and five children. They saved only a little of their furniture. They sat disconsolately by to watch the firemen put out the stubborn blaze.

Otto J. Cass, home superintendent, said the tenants were the sole losers. They renovated the barn at their own expense and the building was of no value to the Government, he said. Eventually, the building was doomed for condemnation because it is on the right of way of the proposed continuation of Overlook dr., he said.

The blaze was discovered shortly before 7 p. m., by Comer Clark, 28, former GI, who occupied one of the middle of the four apartments with his wife, Genevieve, and their daughter, Barbara Jean, age 2.

While Clark gave the alarm that routed the others and brought firemen to the scene, another tenant's wife, Mrs. Annie Birch, 42, futilely fought the blaze with buckets of water. She carried her grandson, Freddie Southwark, 5, to safety and was soon forced to follow as the smoke thickened. Her husband, Fred, was not at home at the time.

Mrs. Bessie Thompson, 37, occupying an end apartmeent, returned to rescue her pet parrot, "Polly," and the family cat, "Mickey," from her own smoke-filled kitchen. Her husband, Fred, 59, and their 13-year-old daughter, Darlene, were also forced to flee.

The family of Bill and Mamie Custer aided in trying to quench the flames, but they, too, had to give up. Two children live in their care, Barbara Baber, 6, and Dolorgs Venanza, 5.

The menfolk of the families are all employed on maintenance work at the home. Superintendent Cass said the families have each been assigned one bedroom in regular employes' quarters, the maximum the home allows.

Post Staff Photos—Ellis

Falls Church Reelects Wells To Council

Incumbent Sherman Wells last night won the only contested seat on the Falls Church Town Council in the annual election.

Three of the six council seats were filled in the election, in which 164 votes were cast.

Falls Church Mayor Fenner Hazelgrove described voting as "moderate" for an off-year election.

Wells received a total of 134 votes, while his opponent, Theodore Arrants, collected only 27. Elected without opposition were Archie Munson, who polled 142 votes for a third term, and John C. McRae, with 139 votes.

Wells, a Woodward & Lothrop maintenance supervisor, has favored a town manager for Falls Church and police salaries on a par with those in Arlington and Fairfax counties.

The three other members of the council, with whom the newly-elected councilmen will serve until next year, are Walter B. Follin, Harry McCarthy and James A. Durant.

Wells Plan Approved

A town manager plan as advocated by Councilman Wells was officially approved in a council meeting Monday night. The new manager, a 42-year-old former manager from another area, is expected to take office on or before September 1, Claude M. Wells, town clerk, said yesterday.

The identity of the appointee, a graduate of the Virginia Military Institute, will be announced June 16. He was selected from a field of 14 applicants and will receive an annual salary of $6000.

Stricter Check Of Building Codes Urged

June 23 Hearing To Consider Delay In Fire Regulations

A plea for more stringent enforcement of building codes as a step to avoid fire disasters was voiced here yesterday by a Government official.

At the same time the District Commissioners announced a public hearing will be held June 23 to consider possible further postponement of the enforcement of new fire safety regulations scheduled to go into effect July 1.

The appeal for strong, revised building codes was made by Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, administrator of the Federal Works Agency and chairman of the President's Conference on Fire Prevention.

Speaking before the Southern Regional Conference of the Council of State Governments at the Mayflower Hotel, Fleming declared the Nation must cut down its "staggering destruction of lives and resources—an annual loss which amounts to a national disgrace and brands us as the most careless and wasteful Nation on earth."

Fleming told the State officials that a national survey of 3000 cities several years ago revealed that a third of them have no building codes and that the majority of building codes which were examined were more than 20 years old and in serious need of revision.

"It seems clear," he said, "that a Nation-wide campaign for adoption or revision of building codes is imperative."

Fleming conceded that a tremendous problem is presented by the thousands of buildings which satisfied fire safety standards when they were built 20 or 30 years ago but do not measure up to present standards.

"Owners of these older buildings," he said, "quite naturally object to undergoing the expense of remodeling them now to meet higher standards."

He said the President's conference had suggested legislation which would provide long-term financing for needed alterations.

"In any event," the general warned, "the job must be done if we are not to have more and more disasters of the Winecoff Hotel and the Cocoanut Grove night club type."

In the District, building owners have described the new fire safety regulation amendments to the District Building Code as too harsh.

The new regulations were adopted March 8, 1946, but the Commissioners postponed their enforcement from December 31, 1946, to July 1, 1947, to allow owners time in which to make necessary changes.

The second postponement, if granted, would give the Commissioners' Committee on Fire Safety Regulations additional time to prepare suggested modification of the new code. Assistant Engineer Commissioner K. E. Madsen, committee chairman, said that 52 specific modification suggestions have been prepared to cut costs of compliance for District building owners.

Court Given Office Space In Hotel

Use of the old Capitol Park Hotel as an annex for crowded District Court was approved yesterday by the Senate Public Works Committee.

There's a big hitch in the plan's future. The House Public Works Committee had earlier told the Federal Works Agency to sell the hotel to the highest bidder. Bids are to be opened June 20.

Senate Public Works Chairman Chapman Revercomb (R., W. Va.) said his committee approved the bill to let the hotel be used as a court annex "because the emergency for space in the District Court is immediate."

He pointed out there was no certainty when the proposed new Federal Courts building would go up.

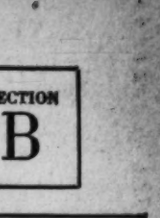
House Public Buildings Subcommittee Chairman J. Harry McGregor (R., Ohio) said it would be very expensive to convert the hotel for use by the court.

Girl, 11, Dies Of Injuries; Man Killed In Accident

Alexandrian Found Under Wrecked Car; Child Was Struck By Auto April 27

D. C. traffic deaths this year.. 32
Deaths this date last year 25
Total deaths last year 72

An 11-year-old schoolgirl succumbed to earlier injuries and an Alexandria, Va., man was crushed to death in his overturned automobile in traffic fatalities reported here last night.



Patricia

The girl, Patricia Ryan, died at Providence Hospital last night after her condition turned suddenly for the worse on Monday. Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ryan, of 823 4th st. ne., she was struck by a taxicab when thrown from her bicycle on April 27.

The dead man, identified by papers in his pockets as William Charles Carr, jr., of 321 S. Washington st., Alexandria, was found under his wrecked convertible coupe. The car apparently left the road on Route 1, Fairhaven, hit a tree and rolled down a 10-foot embankment. The accident happened less than 1 mile south of Alexandria at about 10 p. m.

The girl was riding the bicycle on South Capitol st. and as she crossed the railroad tracks, south of Firth Sterling dr. se., was thrown in front of the taxi when a wheel of the bicycle struck the tracks.

Driver of the taxi was Samuel A. Petro, 32, of 402 12th st. se., who took the girl to the hospital.

She is survived by her parents, two sisters, Ruby, 19, and Nancy, 4, and one brother, William, 17.

Three persons were injured, two seriously, in District traffic accidents yesterday.

Two-year-old Richard Steckler of 7432 Georgia ave. nw., received multiple bruises and lacerations of the scalp, when struck in front of his home by an auto operated by Elbert S. Maloney, 67, of 6600 Piney Branch rd. nw., police said. The child was admitted to Children's Hopsital.

Mrs. Florence T. Gray, 46, of 3715 S. Kemper st., Arlington, Va., was admitted to Emergency Hospital with severe scalp lacerations, possible fracture of the facial bones and bruises to both legs. Police said she stepped into the path of a streetcar, operated by Churchill C. Dowdy, 55, of 2219 39th st. nw., at 7th and F. sts. nw.

A truck, loaded with 4 tons of coal, overturned at 5th st. and Missouri ave. nw. after it swerved to avoid hitting an auto. The driver, Moses L. Gains, 46, of 607 New York ave. nw., was treated at Freedmen's Hospital for a fractured left rib and released. The driver of the car, Joe B. Carpenter, 16, of 1816 Kilbourne st. nw., was not injured.

Dirksen Bill Proposed to Aid Housing

House District Chairman Everett M. Dirksen (R., Ill.) yesterday introduced a bill he said would permit a large-scale effort to "crack" Washington's housing shortage.

The bill would let building and loan associations, and savings and loan associations, invest up to 10 per cent of their assets to build and operate housing.

An official of a local building and loan association, who asked that he not be named, estimated the bill would free at least 30 million dollars here for investment in housing if the local building and loan companies took full advantage of it.

He explained present law permits investment only in Government bonds and in first mortgages on real estate. Present District law says the associations can own only the property needed for their business. Property obtained by a mortgage foreclosure must be resold in a reasonable time.

Under the bill, the associations could go into the housing business only if 5 per cent or more of their assets were in general reserves and undivided profits. An association-owned housing project could not be encumbered by a mortgage.

The bill says the housing built by the associations should be designed, "insofar as practical," for eventual sale to the occupants, individually or as a group.

Washington's Commissioners want their wartime blackout powers continued so they can handle city emergencies in the event of a national coal strike.

Furor in Fairlington

George De Neale, manager of Fairlington, may not be certain as to whether tomatoes are a fruit or vegetable, but he is sure that they are not a flower, and therefore have no place in the flower gardens of Fairlington tenants.

His decision has caused a minor uproar among a number of the 3439 families in the Arlington County Federal housing development, who during the war years were accustomed to planting tomatoes in their flowerbeds. They object now to management's request that they be uprooted. Mrs. Jesse Coop, 4628 31st Road S., active in the protest movement, asserts that the tomatoes do not mar Fairlington's beauty and management should have advised tenants of its attitude before planting.

De Neale, in return, points out that tenants rent apartments but not ground.

Board Maps Prince George School Plans

By Phillip J. Austensen
Post Reporter

School construction costing approximately $2,200,000 has been asked by the Prince Georges County Md. Board of Education.

The board yesterday adopted a resolution requesting the Prince Georges County Board of Commissioners to issue bonds in that amount from the four-million-dollar issue authorized by the last session of the General Assembly.

The school board request will be presented to the commissioners at their meeting next Tuesday in Upper Marlboro, Md. It is expected that bids will be asked on the program in July.

Included in the requests are an addition to the Laurel High School of four classrooms, a gymnasium and a cafeteria; an eight-room auditorium and cafeteria addition to the Fairmount Heights School to cost $284,000. (A contract for the latter has been awarded to the J. D. Hardin Construction Co. of Washington, low bidder); a new nine-room, cafeteria and auditorium elementary school for Landover Hills for which bids will be opened at 8 p. m. June 24 in the Hyattsville County Service Building.

Construction of a 14-room junior-senior high school at Upper Marlboro to be named after Frederick Sasscer, father of Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer, also was requested. Mr. Sasscer was a former superintendent of county schools.

A similar building to replace the present Oxon Hill High School was asked. Both of the present high school buildings will be continued in use as elementary schools.

The resolution requests purchase of land and funds to prepare plans for a new high school near Bladensburg and to prepare plans for a new high school at Fairmount Heights. Purchase of land for a new senior-junior high school in the University Park-Hyattsville area also is included in the requests.

The board appointed John Heim of Upper Marlboro, a teacher at Laurel High School, to be supervisor of transportation and purchasing agent to succeed the late G. Russell Hull. Miss Lillian Harvey was appointed visiting teacher.

Appointment of three new elementary school principals was announced as follows: Mrs. Jennie D. Clagett to Edmonston, Miss Elizabeth McMahon to Colmar Manor and Harold Daugherty to University Park.

Resignation of Dr. Paul C. Underwood as trustee at Beltsville Elementary School was accepted with a resolution of thanks for his services. Trustees for three Negro elementary schools were named as follows: Brentwood, Walter R. Davis; Laurel, Mrs. Pearl Mathews, and Camp Springs, Roland Bowie.

Order Rescinded

Alexandria To Restore Old Market

Acting on a request from 590 petitioners, the Alexandria City Council last night rescinded its previous decision to destroy the old City Market in City Hall Court.

At the same time, the council passed unanimously on first reading an appropriation of $3350 to restore the old market, long considered a landmark in the historic section of the city. A similar motion was voted down by the council last week.

Gardner L. Boothe, Alexandria attorney, who appeared on behalf of the protestants, cited the current use of the market for the weekly sale of farm produce as a reason for retaining it. He also spoke of the historic value of the old structure.

After voting to retain the market and to provide for its restoration, the council agreed to raise the weekly rent for stalls used by farmers from 25 cents to 50 cents.

This, along with rent received from the owner of a permanent shed in the market square, will bring the city an annual revenue of $1200, it was estimated by Councilman George Bender, who proposed the increase.

Acting on the current controversy with Alexandria Hospital over rates charged for the care of indigent patients, the council unanimously reiterated its refusal to pay more than $7 a day. The hospital, which asked a rate of $8.81 a day and a flat grant of $30,000, has announced it will stop accepting indigents after July 1 unless its demands are met.

The council authorized City Manager Carl Budwesky to investigate reports that the Alexandria Water Co. had sought State Corporation Commission approval of a proposal to furnish water to a huge Fairfax County apartment development.

Council members, who had expressed fears the project might imperil the city's water supply, said they were under the impression the water company would await the council's approval before going to the State commission.

Suits Total $150,000

Damage suits totalling $150,000 were filed yesterday in District Court on behalf of 10 veterans against the Hyattsville Building Association, 819 14th st. nw. The suits alleged that the failure of the building association to live up to a financing agreement resulted in loss to the plaintiffs of about $1500 a piece in down payments.

The money was paid to Arlington Builder Stanley P. Hough, who used it to purchase land in Oxon Hill, Md. It was alleged that the building association failed to carry out terms of an agreed loan of $8500 per house for their completion.

Prince Georges Scolds Justices

Prince Georges County Commissioners yesterday rebuked 16 justices of the peace for trial delays in the county.

The commissioners in a letter to each of the committing magistrates said they had been failing to forward warrants to trial magistrates and thereby slowing down court procedure.

Delay in forwarded warrants, the commissioners asserted, holds up preparation of dockets and other necessary court records. They instructed court clerks to report future offenses.

In other actions, the commissioners approved a plan for allocating State tax refunds to incorporated town and special improvement districts. The plan was recommended by a five-man committee.

The plan provides:

That funds received from automobile taxes be divided evenly between the county general funds and the towns and taxing areas on the basis of automobile population. The money from this fund will be turned into the general funds.

That money from the racing commission tax and other collections be split fifty-fifty to the county and to the towns and special areas on the ratio of the town population to the total county population. This money must be spent for capital improvements or for trash and garbage collections, streets and lighting.

An Unasked-for Coal 'Delivery'

RIGHT DOWN THE SEWER—As if there wasn't already enough trouble at 5th st. and Missouri ave. nw., an Agnew coal truck accidentally dumped its load into the storm sewer, which the District has been digging there night and day for several months. Neighbors, who have complained they can't sleep because of the noise, came out to see the cause of the newest racket. Police reported that the truck overturned when the driver swerved to avoid colliding with an auto which allegedly failed to halt for a traffic stop-sign

Montgomery to Open War on Jap Beetles

One of the most elaborate Japanese beetle control programs ever attempted will get under way in nearby Montgomery County on Monday.

O. W. Anderson, county agent, yesterday told the county commissioners meeting in Rockville a total of eight spraying machines, four of the cyclone type and four conventional type, will begin spraying trees and shrubs along every public right of way in the county.

In the suburban areas, he estimated, the population will be virtually freed of flies, mosquitoes and other insects as a result of the one quarter of 1 per cent DDT solution which will be used.

Anderson asked the commissioners for advice on how to proceed when certain property owners object to the DDT spray falling on their shrubbery, lawn or house.

After some consideration, the board voted to give the county agent a go ahead signal, stipulating that complaints would be handled when, and if, they develop.

Anderson stressed that the spray solution will not mark or splotch porches, windows or any part of the house. Nor will it kill bees, he added.

County Supervisor Irving G. McNayr disclosed that under a new arrangement all materials and supplies of the liquor control board, other than beer and liquor purchases, will be handled through the county purchasing bureau.

McNayr said considerable savings are expected through volume purchases of such items as tires and tubes, gasoline and oil, printing, stationery and office supplies, office equipment and automotive equipment.

The purchasing bureau is presently purchasing for the board of education, County Junior College and the Silver Spring Library Association.

The board also wps read a letter from the Kensington Volunteer Fire Department asking for a fire plug nearer the junior high school than the present one, which is 1500 feet away, according to the firemen.

The commissioners took the matter under advisement.

Airport Bill Seen Usurping State Powers

The 500-million-dollar National Airport bill sets a pattern which may lead to a more highly centralized Federal Government.

This warning was passed along to officials attending the Southern Regional Conference of the Council of State Governments yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel by Frank Bane, the council's executive director.

Speaking of the bill, Bane said: "State governments will be undermined by a series of such programs. Give us 10 years of such programs and State governments will become mere administrative units of a highly centralized Federal Government."

Permits Direct Dealing

Bane's argument with the bill is that it permits the Federal Government, through the Civil Aeronautics Administration, to deal directly with individual communities without consultation with the States.

Bane was one of four speakers who addressed the final session of the conference yesterday.

Others were Col. Dexter Martin, South Carolina's director of aviation; Maryland State Senator L. Harold Sothoron, chairman of the Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin, and Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, chief of the Federal Works Agency and chairman of the President's Fire Prevention Conference.

To combat a transfer of further powers to the Federal Government, Bane suggested that the States:

1. Develop sound fiscal patterns.
2. Streamline their administrative machinery.
3. Study the relationship between state and localities.
4. Perfect legislative procedures.
5. Determine that all moves, legislative or otherwise, which tend to lessen State control be opposed.

Selling Program

6. Concentrate on reselling to the American people that our form of Government is more than an abstract idea and one which must be practiced to be maintained.

Sothoron, who is Democratic majority leader in the State Senate at Annapolis, said the Potomac Commission does not believe that Valley Authorities (such as TVA) are the best or only solution to basin-wide planning of river basins.

State Completes Case in Trial Of Bruce Davis for Murder

Hagerstown, Md., June 10.—The State closed its case against Bruce Davis today after presenting an FBI witness who testified blood spots found inside his coat were not his and were the same type as the blood of Mrs. Florence McAllister.

Davis, 31-year-old Government worker who lived at Laurel, Md., is accused of bludgeoning his 29-year-old acquaintance to death with a hammer.

Mrs. McAllister's body was found last December 10 by relatives who searched an unused farmhouse belonging to the family at Burtonsville, Md., a few miles northeast of Silver Spring. State witnesses have testified she had been dead at least three days, perhaps as many as 11.

Briggs J. White, FBI chemist, said he had examined blood on the hammer and on a blanket with which the nearly nude body of Mrs. McAllister was covered and found it to be type O.

Davis' blood, he said, is type A. He reported stains found on a coat taken from Davis after he was arrested December 19 at Memphis, Tenn., were type O.

Albert Grounds, FBI fingerprint expert, told how he had examined the room in which the body was found and discovered Davis' prints on a bureau and on one of two drinking glasses.

Went to Tennessee

State witnesses have quoted Davis as saying he was in the old farmhouse with Mrs. McAllister on November 27, 28 and 29 but left then tc go to Tennessee.

Mrs. Margaret Ray of Laurel, testified she rented a room to Davis from October 5, 1946, to November 29, when Davis left after telling her he planned to get a job in a Baltimore aircraft factory.

Sergt. James M. Anderson of the Montgomery County police, one of the State's main witnesses, testified at the morning session today that Joseph (Dink) Athey, Mrs. McAllister's brother, once admitted he killed her.

Anderson said Athey was drunk in a Laurel tavern at the time and was released after questioning.

Tax on Handbags Unjust to Women, Committee Hears

By the United Press

To tax a lady's purse and not tax a man's pockets is unjust discrimination against every American woman, the House Ways and Means Committee was told yesterday.

Urging removal of the 20 per cent excise tax on handbags, Abraham Mittenthal, a director of the National Authority for the Ladies' Handbag Industry, advised committee members who are considering excise tax revisions, that "women have as much need for their handbags as men have for their pockets."

It is, he said, an "out and out inconsistency and unquestionable discrimination" to tax the ladies and let the men go scot-free.

He detailed the functions of ladies' handbags and asserted that they are obviously necessities, not luxuries, and never should have been included among taxable items.

Population of Italy Put at 45,646,000

Rome, June 10 (U.P.).—The Italian Central Statistics Institute estimated today, on the basis of reports received from the larger cities, that Italy's population was 45,646,000 December 31, 1946. This figure does not include the Venezia Ginilia area and the City of Zara, whose combined populations were 1,028,395 in 1942.

Jane Darwell Is Glad She's Fat, She Says

By Patricia Clary

Hollywood, (U.P.)—Jane Darwell, gulping another bite of whipped cream and chocolate pie, said she'd lose her livelihood if she lost any weight.

She said she never knew success until she got fat.

"When I had a lovely figure I spent months between engagements," she said. "Now I weigh 165 pounds and I have all the jobs I can fill. I believe I will have another piece of pie."

Miss Darwell says she's the only actress she knows in Hollywood who doesn't have to diet. She can eat all the whipped cream, sweets and starches she wants.

"I have to watch my weight," she chortled, "but only to see that it doesn't go down."

Her weight, of course, has made her a cinch for sweet motherly roles. She can almost say the lines in her sleep now.

"People who are fat are supposed to be good-natured, and I suppose that's why I've been put in so many sugary parts," she said. "I got tired of them, but every time I asked for a mean role the producer looked me over and said, 'Are you kidding?' "

When Miss Darwell heard that Columbia was going to film the novel, "Keeper of the Bees," she went to Producer John Haggott and asked to test for the part of Mrs. Ferris, the nasty superintendent of the orphanage.

Haggott started to shake his head.

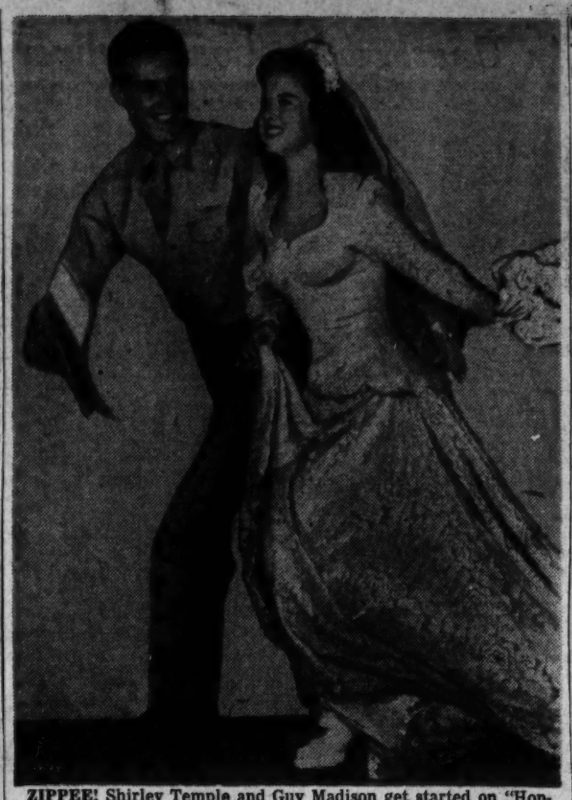
"I talked fast," Miss Darwell said, "I did everything but bob him over the head with his desk lamp to prove how nasty I was. He finally gave me a test and I was so mean I almost scared myself."

She got the part, and now that she has broken the ice she hopes that other villainous assignments will follow.

"I lead a very circumspect personal life, but on the screen I'd like to raise a little Ned occasionally," she said. "There's no reason why thin actresses should get all the meaty bad-woman parts."

Foundry's Finale

Foundry Theater will present "Dark Victory" as its final production of the season Thursday and Friday nights at 8:30 in the drama hall of the Foundry Methodist Church, 16th ad P sts. nw. Jane Plummer Rice is directing. Bob Fabik and Jean Crege play the leading roles.



ZIPPEE! Shirley Temple and Guy Madison get started on "Honeymoon," after several delayed starts this morning at Keith's. The youngsters share star billing with that aging playboy of the screen, Franchot Tone

Tchaikowsky Musical Bills Arlington Tenor; Karloff Gets Paternal

By Richard L. Coe

ROBERT HOFFMAN: This resident of the rambling Arlington Village Apartments has copped one of the leads in the new musical based on the life of Tchaikowsky, patron ghost of the Hit Parade . . . The musical's called "Music in My Heart" and will open in New York July 28 after a Detroit tryout . . . Producer Henry Duffy is hoping this will do for Peter Ilych what "Song of Norway" did for Edvard Grieg . . . And for Duffy what "Norway" did for Producer Edwin Lester . . . Hoffman was one of the three winners in last February's Washington Opera Guild auditions . . . He's been music director in the Arlington Methodist Church, South Arlington, and before that was tenor soloist at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church . . . Stationed here with the Navy for part of the war, he continued his voice training at Baltimore's Peabody . . . Hoffman's role is that of Nikki, captain of the Tsar's guard and the composer's best friend.

Robert Hoffman

BORIS KARLOFF: The horror man of the movies has come to the defense of horror films for children because, says Boris: "Children of today know how to accept the blood-and-thunder stuff at its proper value. Today's children are more poised and sophisticated than when we were young. They know what they are about." . . . The expert hair-raiser also says he's "amused" to find that radio's evening mystery yarns for adults are usually less bloody than programs prepared for children earlier in the day . . . Whatdyaknowaboutthat?

BOSS CRUMP: His Memphis is holding fast to its high and mighty ideas of what films are fit for Tennessee audiences . . . The Memphis Board of Censors, having recently banned "Duel in the Sun," now comes out against the Charlie Chaplin comedy, "Monsieur Verdoux" . . . We don't have to give our reasons," says Lloyd T. Binford, Boss Crump's censorship chairman, but adds: "It is a comedy which makes murder a joke." . . . Massa Binford evidently hasn't seen the point of Chaplin's unusual film . . . "Duel in the Sun," by the way, isn't going to close today at the Palace after all. . . . The lush little epic will hold over for a fourth week.

EDITH J. R. ISAACS: The editor emerita of Theatre Arts, that high-toned monthly, has completed a new book which will be out late in the summer, "The Negro in the American Theater." . . . Mrs. Isaacs developed the book from the special edition her magazine brought out on the subject in August, '42 . . . She traces the Negro's participation in the American theater since the days of James Hewlett, who played "Richard III" and "Othello" in New York . . . She covers the minstrel days, the early Negro musicals, the great comics of the Ziegfeld Follies and the revues of the '20s, coming up to "Carmen Jones," "Finian's Rainbow" and "Our Lan' " . . . Long respected as an influential critic, Mrs. Isaacs can be counted on to produce a volume of sound sense and dispassionate evaluations.

MARIAN LEEDS: Acting the unhappy mother in the National's "Lute Song," Miss Leeds is a former USO trouper who had an unusual wartime experience . . . Many a USO performer went overseas to enjoy the experience of playing before husbands or boy friends . . . But Miss Leeds wound up in a troupe that visited the area where her son was stationed . . . And probably is the only mother to have enjoyed that unusual experience.

ELISABETH BERGNER: A few weeks ago the emotional little star was confiding to you in these pages that she had hopes for a new role next season, something concerning a lady who gives herself up to dat old debbil wheesky . . . Now, says Miss B., she'll do it, and her husband, Dr. Paul Czinner, has it as his first fall offering, "Thorn in the Flesh." . . . It's by Frances O'Neill, former wife of Edwin Justus Mayer, who wrote "The Firebrand," that play about Cellini which was such a smash two decades ago.

MISS GREATER WASHINGTON: Time was she was just "Miss Washington," but this year she'll have that "Greater" before her title . . . Ben Strouse, manager of WWDC, points out that girls from Alexandria, Arlington and Fairfax Counties in Virginia, and Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties of Maryland will be eligible this year . . . Semifinals will be held in July at the Atlas, Naylor and Apex Theaters, with the grand windup scheduled for the Capitol early in August . . . The winner will have a chance at the Miss America crown . . . For the record: the District has had two previous winners: Margaret Gorman in 1921 and Venus Ramey in '44 . . . Here's hoping it won't take another 23 years to cop the crown, girls!

Hedda Hopper

Schnozzola's Going to Get The Girl Under This Contract

Hollywood—Jimmy Durante has signed a new long term contract with Metro. After finishing "On an Island with You" and—he hopes—four weeks of personal appearances in London music halls, he'll head an all-star cast in a new musical, titled "You Are Beautiful," which Joe Pasternak will produce. And in this one the schnozzle gets the girl. How your studio loves you, Jimmy . . . Rex Harrison has become so hepped on horses since he started riding for "Foxes of Harrow" that he wants to do a western. But since that clipped British accent wouldn't jive with the sagebrush country, he'll compromise on an Australian version of a cowpuncher. He has asked Darryl Zanuck to buy "Bush Rider" for him . . . Ella Raines has to cut short her vacation in Miami, where her husband is stationed with the Army Air Forces, and hurry back here for a picture. She has just been handed the plum role of the newspaper girl in Nully Johnson's "The Senator Was Indiscreet," opposite Bill Powell. The picture, to be directed by George Kaufman, starts in about a week.

Jimmy Durante

East Side—West Side

Gene Fowler worked so hard digging up dope on the life of Jimmy Walker in the east that he had a heart attack. Walker's own doctor took care of him. Gene interviewed 260 people and went thru nearly 300 pounds of printed material—including the Seabury papers. He has a list of assistants that any one would envy: Bill O'Dwyer, Gene Buck, Jim Farley, Tom Curran, Grover Whelan, and Johnny O'Connor. He tells me that he'll spend a year, at least, working on the story. Since everybody else is casting the picture that undoubtedly will be made from it, I might just as well add my choice for the Walker role. It's Gene Kelly, who is like Jimmy in action, spirit, size, and features . . . Fowler came home with Walker's famous high hat. It now rests beside that of Bill Fields, the sword Jack Barrymore used in "Richard III," a spittoon that belonged to Patrick Henry, and a window from the old Tombs prison.

Diet a la Pidgeon

With Clark Gable's six day reducing diet formula getting such a play, Walter Pidgeon cracks out with a dish that's guaranteed to add poundage quickly. It's an ultra-short biscuit covered with sweetened unmashed strawberries and thick unwhipped cream. The whole thing floats in a bowl of melted butter . . . Ed Gardner has a gimmick on his next week's air show that should end all those vice president gags. Sid Strotz, vice president of NBC, will appear on Duffy's Tavern as a comedian, while Ed serves as a vice president and fades him off the air . . . Jeanne Cagney, here for "Time of Your Life," has been having the time of her life trying to find a place to live. She bicycled between the homes of her three brothers before finally locating an unfurnished apartment in Burbank.

New Unknown

Mike Curtiz has signed another screen-unknown for his company. She is 21-year-old Rosemary Petit, former Conover model. Her first film will be "Romance in High C," followed by "Shadow of Fear," in which she'll get a top role. . . . Tyrone Power sent Betty Grable's new daughter a huge bouquet of posies with a card bearing this inscription, "From one Jesse James to another." . . . Syd Charisse, on the way to Florida for location shooting on her new Metro picture, will stop off at her home town, Amarillo, Tex., for a celebration being prepared for her. This will be her first visit there since she got into films . . . Tickets for the London premiere of "The Yearling" are selling for $45 each. Proceeds will go to British charities. . . . Parks Johnson, jr. (son of the M. C. for "Vox Pop") will marry Mary Frances Brown, Dallas society girl, June 5.

'An Ignorant, Stupid, Know-Nothing Peasant!'

New York.

FINANCE DEPT.: Spyros Skouras and Dean Alfange went to Albany recently to make a speech for Greek Relief. During the trip Skouras asked Alfange, who had made countless speeches, "How do you capture an audience quickly?" . . . "Just make them feel that you're part of them, and that they're part of you," Alfange advised. . . .

Erich Maria Remarque

When Skouras was called upon to speak, the millionaire head of 20th Century-Fox, whose prestige and influence are international began: "Ladies and gentlemen, I am no great orator. I'm just an ignorant, stupid, know-nothing peasant."

FASHION NOTE: Harry Jans, the veteran vaudevillician who worked at the Palace as a member of the team of Jans & Whalen, is visiting New York now, after an absence of 10 years. He still wears the tall stiff collars which were made for him alone. Jans' collar is so tall that it almost reaches his chin . . . Bugs Baer once said of him: "Harry wears those collars because he has a tattoo of the Empire State Building on the back of his neck."

SOCIAL NOTE: Erich Maria Remarque listened to Clare Boothe Luce and Tom O'Brien, the British M.P., discuss British socialism and its similarity to Russian communism. O'Brien insisted that they were unrelated, because Britain maintains the safety valves of an opposition party . . . Then Remarque and O'Brien went to El Morocco, where the M. P. started to discuss the Palestine problem. "When I was a little boy," Remarque interrupted, "my father gave me two bits of advice on how to stay out of trouble. He told me: 'After 8 p. m., talk only nonsense. And after midnight, never feel insulted'."

TRAVEL DEPT.: Dick Merrill, the veteran pilot, flew more than 40 passengers in establishing a new speed record for Eastern Airlines a few days ago. During the flight he told of the first time he planned a record flight, across the Atlantic. Mabel Boll, the Diamond Queen, asked to accompany him on the flight and Merrill refused to take her. "I don't want to seem ungallant," he told her, "but if it comes to a choice between you or a 10-pound wrench and 105 pounds of extra gas, I've got to choose the wrench and the gas."

NEWS DEPT.: Vincent Sardi, sr., who retired from business last year, was back operating Sardi's restaurant the other night. His return is temporary—he's minding the place only while his son is honeymooning . . . Doubleday, Doran is holding the plates of "Memoirs of Hecate County" until the book is cleared by the courts. "We'll take it to the highest court," vowed Ken McCormick, of Doubleday. "And if we lose there, we'll take it to the United Nations."

MEMORY DEPT.: In the Stork Club Ethel Merman told the story of the grandmother whose family was concerned over her inability to remember anything. She had reached the stage where she had no memory at all. Then one day they sent her with a nurse to Washington, to visit a family friend who is a Senator. When the old lady returned, she told them about her trip and recited each detail. "The Senator took me to the Lincoln Memorial, and to the FBI offices," she began, and described them perfectly. She told of visiting Congress and Mount Vernon. Her family listened with delight to her detailed report of the Senator's taking her to the White House. "He brought me inside," said the lady, "and introduced me to President What's-His-Name."

MOVIES: Laurence Stallings, now working on "Joan of Lorraine," is one of the most energetic men in Hollywood. He engenders excitement in whatever he does or wherever he goes. . . . Herman Mankiewicz, the screenwriter, arrived at Nunnally Johnson's office and collapsed into a chair. "What happened?" Johnson asked him. . . . "I've just been with Stallings," Mankiewicz explained. "I was with him only 5 minutes, and we talked about nothing—and I'm exhausted."

PERSONALS: In Time's story on Colonel McCormick, mention is made of McCormick's being suspicious of people who try to become his friends. "The minute I become friendly with a man," the publisher is quoted as saying, "he wants me to keep his divorce out of the paper or something" . . . Herbert Bayard Swope never entertained such suspicions when he was executive editor of the World. When Ralph Pulitzer, president of the N. Y. World, was divorced Swope published it on the front page. "From then on, no friend could expect me to kill a divorce story," said Swope, "because I was able to say 'If I did it to Pulitzer . . .'"

Ringside Table — With Mary Harris

RAIN, RAIN, GO AWAY! (That goes for hail, too.) The misbehavior of Jupiter Pluvius completely sponged out the opening of Starlight Roof. Sammy Seymour and his freshly organized Skyliners were sad sacks. All that music and nowhere to play it—except in the little Cafe Caprice downstairs . . . The heavy Sunday cloudburst dampened but did not stop the party given in honor of Bandleader Bobby Simpson by his new boss, Nicholas Gaston, owner of the Old New Orleans. The party was given at the Gaston country home in Virginia and while the party-ers couldn't go swimming or enjoy the gardens, they had a large time indoors. Among the many pleasant and well known guests were youthful Representative William G. Stratton of Illionis, Singer Joe Dosh (how he would fit into a smart hotel dancery!), Singer Ted Alexander and Booker Steve Le Sieur, both with their pretty wives; Bandleader Morgan Baer minus redheaded Jolly (they were divorced quietly in Baltimore a few weeks ago), and Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Gerry who sold their Dixie Tavern the other day and are about to take off for Florida.

The China Clipper will close for the summer tonight. Owner Sam Wong, just back from China, is planning a flock of innovations for the fall.

DEAN HUDSON blew through town the other day after playing for the Washington and Lee prom. He said he'd like to return to the Roosevelt Hotel. But that's not so likely with Sammy Marks' band delighting all listeners and apparently set for a long run. Dean and his band will be at the Cavalier Hotel at Virginia Beach this summer.

BRAZIL, BRAZIL! They may have an awful lot of coffee in Brazil, but they have almost as many dances according to Ira Ari, dark-eyed new star of the Casino Royal Revue. Ira interprets Brazilian folk dances, flaunts astonishing and colorful costumes. At the C. R., too, you'll find Comedian Harry Green, the Elaine Shaffer Girls, Singer Louise Lee and the ever unbelievable Jack "Jive" Shaffer.

"Mayor" Ciro Galliotti, owner of Ciro's, will soon return to his spot after six months of Florida sunshine. At present he's at Clearwater Beach.

BANDSTANDING. Are you a composer? If so, the Neptune Room's Carl Parker and Kurt Hetzel will be glad to play your numbers—at any time when you present your music to them. . . . Saxist Bill Joy of Jim Nichol's Rainbow Room is due to become a doting papa very soon . . . Louis Rossi, accordionist with Bob Knight's Band at the Lounge Riviera, used to play with Stephen Kisley at the Carlton. The Kisley Band is now at Chicago's Edgewater Beach . . . Current top tune with George Berg, the Dubonnet Room leader, is "Man Who Paints the Moon" from "Brigadoon" . . . Bob Stickney, pianist at the Silver Fox, used to be half of the vaudeville team of Arno and Stickney . . . The Cats and the Fiddle open Friday at Club Bali.

DREAMY-EYED ALL are the waitresses at the Water Gate Inn. Lanny Ross and Fred Waring were both recent visitors. Lanny came to renew friendship and dine with Owner Marjorie Hendricks and her assistant, Eleanor Mandeville, both of whom he'd met in the South Pacific as Red Crossers.

Bob Brewer, feather-fingered pianist of the King Cole Room, is making odd experiments with his new recording machine. His prize platter so far is one yodeled by his pretty missus. Of it he says, "It may not be music, but it's undeniably unique."

HENRY, THE GARDENER. Any time you pass the big Spanish house on Crittenden st. near 16th, you're likely to see Henry Wong, treasurer of the Lotus, trimming rose bushes and planting shrubs. He recently constructed a stone flagged patio, has also installed a fountain of which he said, "I hear they have one at the White House. If it's good enough for them, it's good enough for us."

HAPPIEST READING of Ruby Foo's owner are those postcards that the spot mails for its customers. (Of course, he reads 'em! He's only human.) An officer recently wrote to Stockholm, "Trade Winds is closed, but I've had a yummy meal downstairs, in Ruby Foo's, just like the ones we used to have together" . . . Mr. Pike doesn't read these postcards for mere curiosity. He says they give him valuable hints on service.

Permanent Studio in Britain Is Planned by Zanuck

By Louella O. Parsons

Hollywood, June 10 (INS).—In September, Darryl Zanuck goes to England to set up a British Twentieth Century-Fox organization. He plans to find a permanent studio where he will make Twentieth productions with top British and American actors.

His first star in London will be Rex Harrison, heading the cast of John Galsworthy's "Escape."

There's been a lot of gossip that Bing Crosby and Al Jolson, who have been so sensational on the air, may be teamed in a movie for Warners.

Bing starts "Connecticut Yankee" in September and he has one more on his Paramount contract before he produces independently. But a deal could be made, you know, between Bing and Jack Warner.

Keenan Likes to Fence

Keenan Wynn, who opens tomorrow night in "Skin of Your Teeth" for Theater Guild, has, he believes, one of the most interesting roles of his life coming up in his next movie. He will play Porthos in "The Three Musketeers," Gene Kelly, I have already told you, is D'Artagnan. Gene, by the way, was successfully operated on a few days ago.

Keenan said that he has always liked to fence.

Nan Wynn had in mind only a session of girlish yacking when she dropped over to hash over old times with June Havoc on the "Intrigue" set.

Sam Bishoff, the producer, took a look at her and said, "What would you rather do than sing?"

"Act," replied Nan.

"All right, you can act the role of the girl singer in this opus," Bishoff replied and he's having the part built up. It was a lucky visit for Nan, who is out for a screen and radio comeback.

An amusing party is the one planned for Mike Romanoff, who has been very sick. As a sop to Mike's vanity, after his face was left on the cutting room floor in "The Other Love," the bosses of Enterprise picked the pieces up, put them together and made a short, with David Niven acting as the commentator. One scene shows Mike blowing his lines 23 times. The short is called "The Other Roomanoff."

When Mike is well enough he will be given a party with a premiere and all the trimmings.

One of Norma Talmadge's best remembered movies, "Secrets," has been taken out of the vault, rewritten, considerably changed and made ready for the cast of Samuel Goldwyn's "The Best Years of Our Lives." The entire cast, with the exception of Freddie March, will be used.

Carmen Miranda has turned blonde because her bridegroom, David Sebastian, favors blondes.

Fifi D'Orsay fell on the stairs at her home, sprained her ankle and cracked a couple of ribs, but she still expects to appear at the Greek benefit in Phoenix.

Fay McKenzie is staying on in New York to replace Jean Parker in "Burleasque" with Bert Lahr.

Roy Rogers voted against taking his two daughters, Cheryl and Linda, on his tour with his "Thrill Circus." Too strenuous for them to take the one-night stands. So they will vacation at Yosemite.

Beautiful, blone Ilona Massey turns brunette in "Monterey," her next picture at Republic. Ilona, who usually sings with Nelson Eddy in these Republic epics, sings with John Carroll this time.

Burke to Head Loan Institute In Washington

By S. Oliver Goodman

Joseph P. Burke, jr., of Mutual Building Association, will be the next president of Washington Chapter, American Savings & Loan Institute. He will succeed Herman Schwertner of Eastern Building & Loan Association.

Burke is assistant secretary and assistant treasurer of Mutual Building, having become associated with the institution when he graduated from St. John's College. He has been active on various institute committees and served as first vice president during the past year.

Other new officers to be installed Friday night at class graduation exercises will be: Miss Augusta Walter, Chevy Chase Building & Loan Association, first vice president, Richard Sinclair, American Building Association, second vice president; Miss Anne Fague, Perpetual Building Association, secretary, and T. W. Blumenauer, Columbia Federal Savings & Loan Association, treasurer.

Marc S. Raichle, president of the national group, will be principal speaker at the exercises in the Mayflower Hotel, and Edward R. McAleer, first vice president of the District of Columbia Building & Loan League, will present the awards.

Auditors Elect Tomorrow

A record attendance of 150 is expected at the annual meeting tomorrow night of the Auditors Section of the District of Columbia Bankers' Association in the Washington Hotel. New officers will be elected and installed.

Present officers are Vernon R. Dorman, chairman; Mrs. Margaret S. McClure, vice chairman; Ernest H. Wilson, secretary, and Fulton H. Dixon, treasurer.

Randolph to Speak

Jennings Randolph, assistant to the president of Capital Airlines, will address members of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association at a meeting tomorrow night in the United States Chamber of Commerce Auditorium. Randolph formerly was a Congressman from West Virginia.

Bank Votes Dividend

Director of Union Trust Co. yesterday declared a semiannual dividend of 5 per cent or 50 cents a share on capital stock, payable July 15 to stock of record June 30.

FHLB Board to Meet Here

Directors of Federal Home Loan Bank of Winston-Salem, N. C., will hold their quarterly meeting here Friday afternoon at the Statler Hotel. Edward C. Baltz of Washington, vice chairman, will preside.

Higher Express Rates Asked

An Interstate Commerce Commission hearing on a proposed higher railway express rate developed yesterday that temporary increases granted last December for a one-year trial period had increased the average charge per shipment by 32 cents or about 20 per cent.

This testimony was given by W. A. Benson, vice president for accounting of Railway Agency, Inc.

J. H. Parmelee, director of the Bureau of Railway Economics of the Association of American Railroads, urged that the trial rates be increased still higher and made permanent. He said the railroads apparently will earn only 3½ per cent on their investment this year whereas they should earn 6 per cent.

The hearing is being conducted by ICC Commissioner M. Splawn and State commissioners from Arizona, South Carolina and Iowa.

Bank Loans Again Drop

Business loans by Federal Reserve member banks in 101 leading cities declined again during the week ended June 4, dropping to the lowest point since April 9, the Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday.

These banks noted a 44-million-dollar decrease in the volume of commercial, industrial and agricultural loans. The total outstanding was $10,630,000,000, or 550 million dollars below the postwar peak reached on April 9. Real estate loans were unchanged for the week at $1,742,000,000.

Five Pounds More Sugar Per Person

The International Emergency Food Council yesterday informed the Agriculture Department that the United States has been awarded 350,000 pounds additional Cuban and Porto Rican sugar.

The allocation was made by IEFC Monday. Twenty other nations, members of IEFC, also were notified of increased allotments.

The additional sugar amounts to about five pounds a person, sugar officials said.

The notification was sent to Agriculture shortly after the House Banking Committee overwhelmingly approved legislation calling for an immediate end of sugar rationing for home consumption.

The legislation, introduced by Representative Ralph A. Gamble (R., N. Y.), does not lift price controls, and continues the authority of the Secretary of Agriculture over inventory controls for industrial users.

Reports were current last night, after the IEFC allocation, that Agriculture Secretary Anderson may remove sugar rationing before Congress gets to vote on the Gamble measure.

The additional allocation will raise this country's sugar supply for the year to about 7.2 million tons, its original request of IEFC, from the 6.8 million tons granted February 21.

Muncrief's 2-Hitter Sinks Nats to 8th

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

IT'S SOME KIND of a tribute to Ted Williams that in the early balloting by the fans for the American League All-Star team which plays the National Leaguers on July 8 at Wrigley Field, the name of Williams commands the most votes, even when he isn't a .300 hitter.

POVICH

Williams never was rated a good fielder, and almost a dozen outfielders are out-hitting him, but there is a greater popular demand for Williams in the voting than for Joe DiMaggio, who is perhaps the league's best outfielder and leads his colleagues in hitting.

It all stems, of course, from the incomparable delights Williams offers the customers, whether or not he's hitting. His actions at the plate provide a thrill—his twitchy elbows, his nervous-seeming posture and the paradox of his cockiness—all bound up, of course, in the high possibility that he'll knock the next pitch out of the lot.

Long ago it was established that the fans, in their voting, don't necessarily go for the high-average men of the moment, but prefer the colorful characters for their All-Star teams. Williams, in his time, has been both.

WILLIAMS HAS A SPECIAL sort of claim on an All-Star berth, anyway. For the three All-Star games in which he has figured, he shows a batting average of .500, with seven hits in his 14 times at bat against National League pitching, and three of those blows have been homers.

The two most historic wallops of the All-Star battling since the game was originated 14 years ago were produced by Williams. Unforgettable is the day in Detroit when he approached the plate with two out in the ninth inning, two on base, and the National League leading, 5 to 4. Claude Passeau was one pitch away from victory with two strikes against Williams when it happened—the longest home run in the history of Briggs Stadium. Big Ted drove in four of the A.L.'s seven runs that day.

In the All-Star game of 1946 at Boston, Williams did rather well, too. In four trips to the plate he banged out four hits, two of them homers. The game's big moment was when Rip Sewell threw his famed blooper pitch at Williams, who went into an adagio dance while waiting for the blooper to come out of the sky, and then timed everything perfectly to lash an almost-incredible home run far into the right center seats.

THE VOTING FOR the first base job by American League fans tells the story of a revolutionary change in cast. Last year it was Mickey Vernon, on his way to the batting championship, who was an almost-unanimous choice for the All-Star first base job. Sitting out the game was George McQuinn, a mere .230 hitter with the A's who was considered at the end of his major league tether.

But look at the voting now. No mention of Vernon, who is struggling in the .260's, but leading the balloting is the 37-year-old McQuinn, one of the American League's top hitters and in the midst of a sensational come-back with the Yankees. Incidentally, it's no new experience for McQuinn to be on an All-Star team. He made it three times during his career.

There can be no quarrel, either, with the voting for the American League's third baseman. Heading the list is the name of George Kell, so far the best third baseman in the business that Connie Mack must rue the day he traded Kell to the Tigers. Kell not only is the only third baseman in the league who is hitting .300 (he's 23 points above that figure), but for a couple of years now he's been the best defensive third baseman in the majors.

THE SHOCKING ITEM would have been if Lou Boudreau, the Indians' playing-manager were not out in front in the voting for shortstop. He is, which is thoroughly appropriate, considering the season Boudreau is having for himself, as the league's leading hitter and the league's best shortstop.

At his position, Boudreau is probably the most challenged star and at the same time the most outstanding. There are more good shortstops in the league than stars at any other position, but Boudreau has maintained a clear lead through the years with his deadly play that is buttressed by his healthy batting averages.

At different times, it was suspected that Vern Stephens of the Browns, and Johnny Pesky of the Red Sox, and little Phil Rizzuto of the Yankees—all of them great shortstops—might eclipse Boudreau, who was supposed to be burdened by his managerial duties. But the laddie known as Lou has thrived on his responsibilities, and it's his rare misplays, not his great feats, that are flabbergasting.

Didrikson Overpowers Two Rivals

By Glenn Williams

Gullane, Scotland, June 10 (AP).—Babe Didrikson Zaharias blasted her way into the quarterfinals of the British Women's Championships with a pair of lopsided victories as her two U. S. compatriots faltered.

The Babe, two strokes under men's par through one nine-hole stretch, was red hot. She knew it. Her rivals knew it. And the gallery knew it. The native Scots forsook virtually every other match—not to see an upset but just to pop their eyes on her tremendous drives.

The former Olympic javelin thrower romped through Mrs. Val Reddan, one-time Irish champion, by a 6 and 4 score in the third round, and crushed Mrs. Cosmo Falconer of Perth, Scotland, 6 and 5, in the afternoon.

She Hits Them a Mile

"Why, I just loosen my girdle and let the ball have it," she answered one galleryite who asked why her drives were from 50 to 100 yards longer than those of her victims.

Meanwhile, Helen Sigel of Philadelphia was eliminated in the morning and Ruth Woodward of Fall River, Mass., was ousted in the afternoon, leaving the Babe as the lone United States threat for the sole major British golf title still on this side of the Atlantic.

In tomorrow's quarterfinals she will play Frances Stephens of England, who today bested Mrs. C. K. Boyd, also of England, 6 and 5. If both Mrs. Zaharias and Jean Donald, the home-bred pride and Scottish golf queen, win in the morning, they will oppose each other in the afternoon semifinals.

Sigel, Woodward Lose

Miss Sigel, brown-eyed blonde from Philadelphia who was a finalist in the 1941 women's United States Amateur, was betrayed by a treacherous putter in her 3-and-2 defeat by Molly Smyth, tall and redhaired Irish golfer. Miss Sigel said her left wrist, sprained before the tourney, wasn't to blame for her loss.

Miss Woodward trimmed Catherine Park, 1 up, in the morning and then lost on the eighteenth of the afternoon round by the same score to Mrs. K. M. MacKean of Wales. The New England miss sent her drive on the final hole into the heavy grass on the edge of a bunker and when she needed three to get out she conceded the hole and match to Mrs. MacKean.

Even the Babe's wildness couldn't halt her in the morning round. On the seventh hole she drove into the rough but laid her second on the green, dead to the pin. She had an easy second shot to reach the green on the 450-yard fifth and the 300-yard sixth left her only a short chip after her drive.

Two Under Men's Par

But it was Mrs. Falconer, a gray-haired, determined housewife, who suffered the full fury of the Babe's game. Mrs. Zaharias traveled the first nine of the fourth round in 33—two strokes under men's par and four under regulation for women.

"I was only one over par and still was four down at the end of six holes," Mrs. Falconer moaned to a friend.

"It seems cruel to send our girls out against a game like that," observed a listener.

Probably Mrs. Zaharias' best golf of the day was on the fourth hole against Mrs. Falconer. Her drive left her 40 feet short on the par 3 layout but Babe merely hitched up her sky-blue slacks, lined up the putt on the rolling green and rammed it home.

Mrs. Zaharias, wife of Denver's George Zaharias, had 23 putts in the 13 holes of the fourth round.

Miss Donald, the Babe's likely foe in tomorrow afternoon's semifinals, defeated Philomena Garvey, 20-year-old Irish champion, 3 and 2 today.

Spence Belts Home Run In 2-1 Loss

By Al Costello
Post Reporter

St. Louis, June 10.—The Nats hit a couple of new lows tonight. They bounced into the American League basement and also reached a new level for base hits-as Bob Muncrief spun a two-hitter at them to register a 2-1 triumph for the St. Louis Browns and pull the home boys out of the same cellar the Nats now occupy.

Muncrief was acting the part of a great pitcher tonight. He gave the Nats those two hits grudgingly—one Stan Spence's seventh homer in the eighth and a lead-off single in the first by Joe Grace that was somewhat tainted.

Further, the Brownie hurler, who reached the .500 mark with 5 victories in 10 decisions, permitted the Nats to put only two other men on base, issuing a walk to Grace in the fourth and could hardly be held responsible for Vern Stephens' inglorious muff of Mark Christman's pop fly in the eighth.

Nats Slowed Down to Walk

In all, the Nats could get only six balls out of the infield against the Browns' right-hander, including Spence's circuit shot and Grace's single, which took off on a crazy hop over First Baseman Walt Judnich's head when he bent over to field it. The other four were easy flies, one to Heath in left, another to Zarilla in right and the other two to Paul Lehner in center.

Sid Hudson was the resisting victim. Sid, seeking his fifth victory but instead winding up with his second defeat, pitched a good enough game to win the average game, which this wasn't.

He granted seven hits, only two of which came after his rocky fourth inning when his generosity more than the base hits gave the Browns their two runs, which turned out to be enough.

Hudson put the Browns winning pair of tallies in motion in that fatal fourth by walking Zarilla. Judnich followed with a single. Moss relieved the tension for a moment by flying to Spence.

Muncrief came up with the obvious intention of trying to bunt, but Hudson worked too carefully on him trying to thwart the sacrifice with the result that Muncrief drew a base on balls, filling the bases.

Bob Dillinger, Brownie third baseman, rose to the occasion by plastering a line single to left, scoring Zarilla and Judnich.

Brownie Threats Halted

Previously, Hudson had pitched himself out of tough situations in the second and third innings. In the second, singles by Heath and Zarilla and a walk to Judnich filled the bases, but Hudson lured Moss into popping and proceeded to fan Muncrief.

Lehner's double off the screen in right and a walk to Heath gave the Browns another golden chance in the third, but Stephens, handcuffed in a batting slump, forced Lehner, at third with a bounder to Robertson.

Hudson's best demonstration of tight pitching came in the fifth when Heath's long fly was misjudged and misplayed into a triple by the usually smooth Spence. Hudson made Stephens and Zarilla ground out as Heath stayed put on third, walked the dangerous Judnich purposely and got Moss on an easy fly to Spence.

That was the last Brown threat. But the Nats, who have now corralled the grand total of four runs in their 61 innings, were helpless by the brand of ball Muncrief was trowing at them.

Outside of Spence's eighth inning homer the Nats were behaving like a last place ball club—which is exactly what they are right now.

Locke Sees New Record In U. S. Open

St. Louis, June 10 (AP).—Some golfers bothered by wind and St. Louis heat revised upward today their estimates of the score it will take to win the U. S. Open Tournament starting Thursday, but Bobby Locke, the South African star, still thinks a new record score will be set.

After a tour of inspection over the St. Louis Country Club course, which found him in the rough on several occasions, Locke said he thought the 10-year-old record of 281 established by Ralph Guldahl at Oakland Hills outside Detroit would probably be beaten this week by one stroke.

"These fairways are very narrow—very narrow," Locke said. "I'd certainly like to sit here in the clubhouse with a 280, and let the others try to beat it."

Guldahl himself expressed belief that his record will stand.

Ed Furgol, Locke's playing partner on their first practice round, which went only 15 holes, said the 6532-yard layout appeared to have been made for Locke. He explained that it is on the same pattern as the course in Philadelphia where Locke finished 72 holes in seven under par.

Ben Hogan, who shares the favorite's role with the 29-year-old Locke, paired with Jimmy Demaret, the Masters' champion, in a match with Frank Stranahan, Toledo, Ohio, amateur, and Toney Penna, and complained that his game was off. He shot a 73, two over par.

Hope Won't Miss National Celebrities Show Next Year

By Bus Ham
Post Reporter

Bob Hope missed the first National Celebrities golf tournament at ColumbiaColumbia Golf and Country Club, but he will be here for the second annual party next spring.

In his room at the Hotel Statler shortly before midnight, Hope was hastily dressing for an airplane trip but he said between hitches at his belt:

"I never regretted anything quite so much as not being in Washington for your tournament. I am so swamped that I simply couldn't get away.

"But, heck, you had such a wonderful affair that you didn't need anybody else. I've heard wonderful reports about it.

"Sure, I'll make my plans to be on that first tee next year.

"What are those dates? About May 15-16.

I'll know positively by February."

That certainly will be early enough, Robert.

The guy with the funny pan and rapid-fire tongue on the air was in one of his serious moods off stage. Nothing more than humming a tune as he slipped on his socks.

Hope's last show of the broadcast season originated here last night.

Today he will be up in the air, headed for South America, a month of relaxation and a lot of golf.

He squeezed in 27 holes at the Burning Tree course while in town. He was round in 78, then a 40 for an additional nine.

"It wasn't so hot but maybe I'll be better next May," he said with a parting handshake just like any other good Joe.

Macks Defeat Tigers Again

Detroit, June 10 (AP).—Outlasting the American League leaders in a see-saw slugfest, the Philadelphia Athletics put together 14 hits, including three home runs, two doubles and triple, today to nose out the Detroit Tigers for the second time in as many days, 9 to 8.

Eddie Joost, Elmer Valo and Hank Majeski each poled his fourth homer of the season as the A's came from behind twice to win with a four-run uprising in the seventh inning.

Frank Carbo Mum Following Hearing By Grand Jury

New York, June 10 (AP).—Paul J. (Frankie) Carbo, whose alleged connections with several boxers have been under investigation by the district attorney's office, and Johnny Greco, Canadian contender for the welterweight championship, testified before the grand jury today.

The grand jury, reconvened from February to continue the investigation, sat unusually late to hear Carbo, who emerged from the district attorney's office just before 7 p. m. He had been questioned for two hours.

Greco, 24, asked what he was to be questioned about, he said, "I wish I knew. I came in voluntarily May 19 and they gave me a subpena to come back June 4. Then they gave me one for today."

He never had been questioned before, he said. Asked if Carbo was his manager, Greco replied, "No, Franklie Doyle is my manager."

"Has Carbo got a 'piece' of you?" he was asked.

"No. He's a friend of mine and my family—an adviser," Greco responded.

"What does he advise you about?" he was asked.

"On investments and things," Greco replied.

Carbo, who on June 3 waived a hearing in Superior Court, New Haven, Conn., and agreed to accept a subpena in connection with the inquiry here, had been sought for four months.

Poe Birds: Old Crow

They Shoot the Raven Evermore

By Fritz Howell

Columbus, Ohio, June 10 (AP).—Come next Monday, we may have to dig up some new descriptive phrases to replace the well-known and oft-used "black as a crow" and "as the crow flies."

For there's just an outside chance there will be no crows left—especially around Northwestern Ohio—and we'll be able to quote the Raven nevermore.

As kids out in Illinois' Sangamon River Valley we used to borrow Uncle Harry's 10-guage shotgun, a mighty scattergun, and kill scores of the black raiders just for the heck of it without making a dent in their population, but there are new rules since those sore-shoulder days.

Instead of a casual, just-for-fun crusade against the raucous-voiced marauders, they're launching a full-scale assault against the predatory pests this weekend at Grand Rapids, Ohio, some 25 miles up the Maumee River from Toledo, where Jack Dempsey, some 30 years ago, took the heavyweight title from Jess Willard.

The occasion is the ninth annual crow shoot, scheduled Friday, Saturday and Sunday. The big day is Saturday, and oddly-equipped marksmen from all over the country will be on hand to help erase the highly hated birds.

Although James W. (Jim) Stuber, stocky wild life technician and career man with the Ohio Conservation Division for a quarter century, says the crow count is up 30 per cent since 1940, due to the wartime ammunition lack, the crow shooters will take no chances on not having plenty of targets.

They will take to their well-concealed blinds accompanied by a Boy Scout; a shotgun or rifle with scads of ammunition; dull clothing which blends with the background (no reds, such as deer hunters wear to keep from shooting each other); a drab-colored hat (crows can see your bald spot from far beyond gunshot range); and decoys ranging from live snakes through housecats in cages, stuffed owls, crippled crows and live hawks.

The event winds up Sunday morning at breakfast at which the hunters will 'eat crow' literally.

Out in Illinois we didn't even pick 'em up.

At Charles Town:

Dear Folks:

An owner was talking to a jockey after the race and asked, "What did you take the horse to the inside for?" The boy replied: "I was trying to save all the ground I could." The owner snapped back: "Don't save any ground for me, I can't put that in the bank." Earl Auld, Washington trainer, shipped in Never Regret, Etectrix and Minority from Laurel. Harry Huff, former trainer, is agent for Jockey Willie Nertney who incidentally is making a swell comeback and has a chance of being the leading rider. John Foster, local representative of the Horsemen's Association, is asking all horsemen who lose thoroughbreds by claiming to turn over registration papers to new owners. This is important especially when racing in Maryland. E. K. McDonald, of Washington, brought Janet Mack and Fitz Town over from Laurel. Ray Arduini, brother of Johnny, who is the star amateur boxer, is riding in excellent fashion. Norman Stanton is handling his engagements. Jockeys Carson Kirk, Beverley Hacker and Don Padgett, all of whom were top riders here at one time, were visitors last Monday, coming down from Delaware Park. King M. Boyd vanned Parnard and Gold Jack here from the Abington, Va., farm. Galt Davis, who lost Ted O on a $1500 claim, took the horse back for $2000. See you on the rail. BILL.

Hot Pole, Fitz Mede Lose by Nose

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., June 10.—In a slam-bang, three-way photo finish that would be the talk of the Nation had it come in a Derby or a Preakness, Ariel Legend won by a thin nose over Hot Pole in the Cruse Purse, featuring this sunny afternoon.

Carrying the colors of Miss Virginia McKenney, of Washington, and ridden by Jockey Woodrow Kirk, of Silver Spring, Md., Ariel Legend paid $10 and was clocked in 1:19 over a track that was drying out as the program progressed.

Third money in the field of eight went to Mrs. W. Hayhurst's Fitz Mede, a six-year-old who had the most trouble in the rugged stretch battle.

Another Win for Kirk

Kirk, oldest of the riding brothers, won at the expense of Sammy Palumbo who rode with the desperation of a hungry apprentice boy. Hot Pole was racing for W. V. Keegan.

Ariel Legend went to the front at the break and set a strong pace as the favored Erato and Gal Royal tried to keep up. Palumbo rated Hot Pole at this stage and Fitz Mede was having trouble getting under way.

On the backstretch, Erato began to tire. Ariel Legend continued to show the way while Fitz Mede moved to serious contention on the inside. Palumbo had to snatch up and then drove through between the two leaders, bumping Fitz Mede.

Still Battling at End

It looked like Hot Pole's race in midstretch, but Kirk went to work on Ariel Legend. In the final drive it was dog-eat-dog, with first one and then the other showing in front. Kirk and Palumbo kicked and rocked with all they had, as did Churchill on Fitz Mede.

Even after the finish, the two veteran riders were still battling and they were having words as they pulled up their horses.

Palmer Sowers, of Washington, saddled two winners on the program and might have made it three had not Jockey J. Keenan lost a stirrup in the final drive of the second race.

Sowers sent One Lee out to win the opener at $14.40 and those who coupled this filly with E. F. Kelly's Gayolade, the $9.20 winner of the second, collected $107.80 in the daily double.

Reds, Bums Split; Blackwell Wins 8th

Brooklyn, June 10 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers came from behind to salvage the second game of a double-header with Cincinnati, 6 to 5, after losing the opener, 5 to 1, today but fell back into a second-place tie with the Boston Braves who defeated Chicago.

Trailing, 5 to 4, in the last half of the eighth inning, the Brooks tied the count on Jackie Robinson's home run and came through with the winning run on a walk and a double by Catcher Bruce Edwards. It was their first win over the Reds in five engagements this season. Ralph Branca, who lost the opener to Ewell Blackwell, got credit for the nightcap victory with two scoreless relief innings.

Blackwell, the stylish stringbean, twirled his eighth victory and his sixth straight. He missed a shut-out in the ninth inning when with two out Gene Hermanski doubled and scored on Marv Rackley's single.

Card Flag Hopes Hinge On Musial, Slaughter—Dyer

PHILADELPHIA, June 10 (AP).—St. Louis Cardinal pennant hopes rest largely on the physical condition of Enos Slaughter and Stan Musial, says Manager Eddie Dyer, and he insisted today the team still is talking and thinking pennant.

Musial

Slaughter

We've just about found ourselves," he said from the depths of a last place tie, a neighborhood where the World Champions have floundered most of the season.

"We won last year because we were able to keep Musial and Slaughter in every inning of every game. When we get back to that, we'll win again."

Slaughter, hobbling from an ankle injury, is well enough to pinch hit and may get into the lineup soon. His .360 batting average will be more than welcome.

Musial, the Donora, Pa., smoothie who was the National League's most valuable player last season has been hampered by illness. But he pushed his batting average above .200 yesterday and Dyer figures he'll keep on going.

FOR the benefit of those fans who have written off the Redbirds as pennant contenders, Dyer pointed out that they were within a whisper of vaulting into fifth place yesterday.

All that was needed was a single run somewhere between the eighth and fourteenth inning of the league's longest game to date this season.

But the Cardinals couldn't get the run; the Philadelphia Phillies did in the fifteenth, and thereby won 2-1.

Pelicans War on Gambling

New Orleans, June 10 (AP).—A full-scale war on gambling at Pelican Stadium here has been launched by police and officials of the New Orleans Southern Association baseball team.

Roy Dissinger, general manager of the team, announced that A. B. "Happy" Chandler, high commissioner of baseball, would be asked to aid in ridding the park of gamblers.

Police Superintendent A. A. Watters announced that 10 plain-clothes police officers have replaced the uniformed men at the stadium. Watters said that the increased detail was made at the request of the Pelican baseball club.

The police chief said that the officers had spotted some apparent bookmaking at recent games and sometimes on each pitch.

Dissinger said he would appeal to Chandler and also to George Trautman, minor league commissioner, if gamblers continued to offer bets on games.

This May Be Hack's Last Year

New York, June 10 (U.P.).—Insiders insist that smiling Stan Hack is putting in his last season at third base for the Chicago Cubs this year.

The 37-year-old Californian is serving his sixteenth season with the Bruins and admits he's lost "a step or two" going down to first base. He suffered an injured leg recently and Harry (Peanuts) Lowery was substituted at the hot corner.

Bruin Boss Charley Grimm says Stan will remain with the Cubs "just as long as he likes." But Hack is tired of playing night games, frequent train hops and being away from his family.

Should he quit the Cubs at the end of the current campaign, it is extremely likely that the popular pepper-pot will land a managerial job in the Pacific Coast League, where he can be near his Sacramento home.

100 Tee Off in Touchdown Club Golf Tourney Thursday

Over 100 golfers will tee off in the Touchdown Club's tournament tomorrow, feature of the club's fourth annual outing at the Manor Golf and Country Club.

Two of the outstanding contenders in the tournament will be John Jankowski, tournament champion of two years ago, and his brother, Mike Jankowski, a newcomer. Both will play without a handicap.

Harry Pitt, long an outstanding golfer in this vicinity, and other standouts also will be included in the field.

A softball game involving the club's letter and nonletter men, horseshoe pitching, a 40-yard foot race and other events will round out the program.

Sain Hurls Braves to 2-1 Victory

Boston, June 10 (AP).—The Boston Braves made it four victories in a row today by edging the Chicago Cubs, 2-1, behind silent Johnny Sain, who squeezed home what proved to be the winning run and then pitched himself out of a tight jam to gain his sixth triumph of the season.

By winning while the Cincinnati Reds defeated the Brooklyn Dodgers, 3-1, in the opener of a double-header the Braves assured themselves of at least a tie for second place in the National League.

Gichner Planned To Quit Anyway, Ump Prexy Says

Milton L. Pettit, president of the D. C. Baseball Umpires' Association, said last night that the resignation of Henry Gichner, veteran arbiter, came as no surprise to him.

The Umpire Association Monday night accepted the resignation unanimously. Gichner resigned, he said, because he believed the association's ruling not allowing its umpires to officiate games in which Negroes were participating as undemocratic.

Pettit said last night, however, that that Gichner had told him before the season started that he planned to resign. "Gichner told me," Pettit said, "that he found that business pressure and umpiring sandlot baseball games was too much for him. He said nothing last night about the Negro ruling when he asked that his resignation be accepted."

Gichner denied that there was any move among the association umpires to quit the group, and accept games involving Negro players. "It seems that I'm the only umpire that has taken the anti-Negro ruling as a personal matter."

Gichner also denied that he had planned to resign before the season started.

Flood Waters Of Missouri Still Rampant

Hannibal, Mo., June 10 (AP).—The Missouri River crumbled levees and poured torrents of muddy water over hundreds of thousands of acres in north central Missouri today, but the swollen Mississippi was leveling off in the hard-hit sector north of here as its crest moved downstream.

Col. W. E. Potter, district Army engineer at Kansas City, estimated in a report telephoned from Glascow, Mo., that one million acres had been inundated by the rampant Missouri and its tributaries in the rich farming district of north central Missouri.

The Midwestern area headquarters of the American Red Cross said another 2200 persons had fled their homes in Missouri and Illinois, bringing to about 5700 the number of homeless in the two States.

Red Cross officials estimated that 16,000 persons were homeless in Iowa, bringing the three-State total to 21,700. Some of these were expected to return to their homes as flood waters receded in the Des Moines River valley.

Meanwhile, lowland residents below the confluence of the Missouri and Mississippi Rivers, near Alton, Ill., were threatened with a repetition of the flood of last April.

In north central Missouri, Colonel Potter reported that about 500,000 acres of the flooded farm land was in the Glascow-Boonville area. He said that only six levees were still standing in that area and that five of these were expected to break momentarily.

Five hundred weary workers continued their fight to save a 60-mile section of levee in Pike County, Ill., across the Mississippi from Hannibal, with more than 100,000 acres in danger of going under. The upper section of the dike was reported by Army engineers to be in a "critical condition."

The muddy waters remained in parts of several river towns, including Hannibal, Canton and Alexandria, Mo., and the Red Cross said the towns of Annada, Mo., and Meyer, Ill., were being evacuated.

Army engineers reported two new levee failures, one at Riverland, Mo., inundating 5900 acres and another near Kissinger, Mo., flooding 2300 acres, and revised upward to more than 39,000 their estimate of the number of acres flooded between Wapello, Iowa, and St. Louis.

The Missouri division of health urged immunization against typhoid of persons in the flood areas, and said adequate supplies of vaccine were available at local health offices.

Bigger British Trade Credits To Soviet Seen

London, June 10 (AP).—Authoritative government sources said today Britain was likely to give Russia bigger credits and more lenient repayment terms on existing debts as a step toward improving Anglo-Soviet trade relations.

Russia recently surprised British treasury experts by asking for a 220-million-dollar credit, bearing ½ per cent interest annually and repayable over 16 years.

A treasury spokesman said the Soviet proposals were studied by departmental experts who, in turn, made certain recommendations to a cabinet economic subcommittee.

The government sources said that, although several adjustments have been made on Russia's debts to Britain, the cabinet was likely to okay the latest Soviet request because it would permit trading between the two countries to be resumed at least on a prewar basis.

Wallace Talk Faces Boycott By Democrats

By Bert Andrews

Democratic bigwigs in Washington, headed by President Truman, will stay away in droves when Henry A. Wallace speaks here on Monday night, it became apparent yesterday.

A survey made by telephone indicated that the boycott by leading party members will be practically complete, even though unofficial and unorganized.

A reporter, aware of President Truman's current adverse opinion of the former Vice President and former Secretary of Commerce, put a formally worded but tongue-in-cheek question to a White House attache: "I assume the President is going to be on the platform with Mr. Wallace Monday night?"

The attache gasped and exclaimed: "Going to what!" Then, recovering, he said President Truman had no plans to attend and that he wasn't even sure whether he had been invited.

Gael Sullivan, executive director of the Democratic National Committee, said he had a previously made speaking date in New York for Monday night.

Fifteen other Democrats who talked about it on the phone all said they had other plans for Monday night.

Seats for the Wallace-Pepper-Mostel bill are selling for $3.60, $2.40, $1.80, $1.20 and 60 cents. The conference said that between half and two thirds of the 8000 seats have been bought, and that 1000 seats can be assembled in a hurry at the Water Gate amphitheater in West Potomac Park, if necessary.

Fire Extinguishers Authorized for Berwyn School

Four fire extinguishers for the Berwyn Elementary School were authorized yesterday by the Prince Georges County Board of Education.

County school teachers were admonished at the same time by Superintendent of Schools G. Gardner Shugart that their first duty in event of fire is to clear the school of children.

Debutantes' Take Party Spotlight

By Marie McNair

YESTERDAY was a day for young people with a debut tea on the calendar and a sub-deb dance last night.

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. William H. Arnold presented their daughters, Betty Welsh Arnold and Emily Cocke Arnold, at a garden tea at the Army War College. Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Saul and Comdr. and Mrs. Richard Farrelly gave a dance together at the Sauls' home on Chain Bridge rd. for their daughters, Ruth Saul and Patsy Farrelly.

Betty and Emily Arnold wore twin frocks of white taffeta with full skirts and overskirts of alternating panels of Alencon lace and net. The fitted bodices were of lace with off-the-shoulder bands of lace and net. They carried nosegays of violets trimmed with pink rosebuds and studded with daisies.

Sharing honors with them was Miss Elizabeth Standish Darst of St. Louis, the Arnold's former home, wearing a frock of pale pink sheer crepe.

Sharing Honors

Miss Darst made her debut in St. Louis last week and she'll entertain for Emily Arnold when she visits St. Louis late this month.

Taking no chances on the weather, General and Mrs. Arnold and their daughters, received their guests in the drawing room.

Chief of Staff At Fort Monroe Rites

Capt. Eisenhower Weds Miss Barbara Thompson

HIGHLIGHTING the June bridal season in service circles was the wedding yesterday in Fort Monroe, Va., of Miss Barbara Jean Thompson and Capt. John Sheldon Eisenhower, USA.

The bride is the daughter of Col. and Mrs. Percy W. Thompson, and Captain Eisenhower is the son of the Chief of Staff and Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Scores of officials and friends from the Washington area made the journey down to the picturesque old Army post for the ceremony which was held at 4 p. m. in the chapel. A reception followed at the Beach Club.

Koos Hosts At Embassy Garden Fete

ONE of the lovely garden parties for which the Chinese Embassy is famous was held yesterday afternoon between 5 and 7. A marquee was set up on the rolling lawn of Twin Oaks, with flaps up to let the summer breezes through. Full blown peonies and red roses centered buffet tables laden with tempting dishes of hors d'oeuvrés and turkeys; ices and cakes. Inside the embassy, rooms were filled with garden flowers, and another buffet was set up in the dining room.

Mme. Koo, wife of the Ambassador, looked charming as she received her guests. Her white silk costume was set off with ancient Chinese gold accessories, and a corsage of gardenias was pinned at her waist. The Ambassador received with Mme. Koo and the guest of honor, Gen. J. L. Huang, aide to the Generalissimo, who is visiting here.

Highest ranking officials of the Army and Navy were invited to the fete, held in recognition and appreciation of work done by members of the United Service to China.

The Secretary of State and Mrs. George Catlett Marshall were among those invited, and Fleet Admiral and Mrs. Chester W. Nimitz. Supreme Court Justice and Mrs. Harold H. Burton were there; also Justice and Mrs. Stanley R. Feed. Other prominent Washingtonians invited included Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Patrick Jay Hurley, Mr. and Mrs. John R.

Your Questions On Homemaking

My tray, which is silver plate on copper, had a rubber band put on it. I have been told silver polish will not remove the mark What treatment should it be given? In your directions for furniture refinishing, you say to apply shellac before the stain to control it. With small children in the house, we get numerous scratches which show up light; darkening preparations wear off in a short time. Can I omit the shellac so the stain will sink in, or would the finish be unsatisfactory? The only linseed oil I was able to find recently was replacement oil. Can this be used satisfactorily in combination with other things to keep furniture from drying out? For soaking a wooden figure to prevent cracking? R. O.

I see no reason why a good silver polish will not remove the mark. It will probably take more rubbing than to remove varnish, but it will come off.

The reason one applies shellac to a piece of furniture before staining it is so that the stain can be put on without streaking. If you wish your piece to be dark, thin the shellac.

If the replacement oil was recommended by a reliable dealer for use instead of linseed oil, it will probably be satisfactory for all linseed oil uses.

I have a table that is made of oak or some similar material. It needs refinishing and I would like advice for obtaining that dull satin finish new tables have. I know how to remove the old finish and revarnish, but I get a bright glistening finish. F. B.

To obtain the dull satin finish you so admire, sandpaper the well-dried varnished surface. Use No. 4/0 or No. 6/0 sandpaper wrapped around a wood block. Now, wipe clean with a dry lintless rag. Repeat these operations, applying two or three coats of varnish, drying thoroughly and sanding after each application. Finish by rubbing with rottenstone or powdered pumice and raw linseed oil. The harder and longer you rub, the lovelier the finish will be. It's surely not easy to refinish furniture, but a well done piece will give you years of satisfaction.

Am anxious to paint the cement floor in our basement. Have heard conflicting opinions on the effectiveness and permanency of such treatment. Will rubber base paint be necessary? Will the paint peel? What is the best method? R. H.

I see no reason why you can't paint your floor and have a satisfactory finish. Use the paint made specifically for cement and concrete. To be sure that the concrete is thoroughly clean before painting, scrub it with hot water and household cleanser and rinse well. Do not use soap. Allow it to dry completely before applying paint. Follow the paint manufacturer's directions. A rubber base paint is not necessary.

To give a harder finish to your floor, when the paint is thoroughly dry, several days or even a week after painting, wax and polish it just as you would a wood floor. This will help to prevent peeling and chipping.

Please tell me how to revamp an old fiber rug. It has not been used for many years. I would like to paint it but am not sure what kind of paint to use or whether it is advisable. M. L. F.

If the rug fibers are not broken, your rug can certainly be given a new lease on life by painting. Use a good quality house paint thinned with turpentine in the proportion of 1 part turpentine to 3 parts paint. Work the paint thoroughly into the fiber with a paint brush. The surface under the rug should be well protected with a thick padding of newspapers before you start painting.

What can I do to remove heavy stains around the sleeves made by wrist perspiration? I have opened the sleeves and had them soaking in some cleaning fluid, also in soap suds. Has the fact that for a couple of years I stored the jacket, let the spots set, anything to do with the difficulty? I. F.

Since the stains have been in your coat for two years and as you have already tried several methods of removing them, it seems they are there to stay. If it is a very good jacket, why not have it dyed a darker color?

Widower Made Offhand Mention of Marriage To Divorce Early in Romance Which Began Two Years Ago; Now He Avoids the Subject

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married and divorced and for more than two years I have been keeping steady company with a widower many years my senior.

About six months after we started going together he mentioned marriage in an offhand manner, but he hasn't pursued the subject since. For the past year now I have been trying to establish a formal engagement, which of course would include a ring.

His two grown children have no objections to me and have said as much to him. He is in business for himself and well-to-do, so there are no money worries. We love each other devotedly and he doesn't want to part with me. My whole life revolves around him, but as for marriage, he always puts me off with one excuse after another.

How can I make him see that, come what may, I want him and him alone? And how can I make him understand the importance to me of having a formal engagement? Inasmuch as he has been a widower for three years, he needs a home life as much as I. Please advise me. P. J.

Inside Dope on Men's Reflexes

DEAR P. J.: The widower knows full well that, come what may, you're mad for him. He is surfeited with grief that your only interest in life is him. That's why he reacted defensively when you talk of marriage.

As it happens, I've just read a book prepared for husband hunters, written by a man who gives the inside dope, from the male viewpoint, on how to convert an interested admirer into a husband.

The pointers given are as old as the hills and still keyed to the whiskered theory that men must be humored in the illusion that they are stalking elusive quarry in courtship. Actually, of course, the author confides, this theory is nonsense. The girl who waits quietly for true love to claim her will die a spinster, like as not.

Man Must Think He's Aggressor

TO WIN a husband, he says in effect, a girl must work at it, indefatigably and by indirection. She must beat the bushes where men are, put herself in the path of many until she attracts the attention of one she wants, then deftly maneuver a change of pace that lets him think he is doing the pursuing and gradually wearing away her resistance to captivity.

The gist of his advice is: Before marriage, never wear your heart on your sleeve for the man you want. Don't be always available when he bids for your company, until the courtship is well advanced—the engagement cinched and wedding plans afoot.

Even bona fide interest is dulled and matrimonial impulses nipped in the bud if a girl weakly or naively responds intensely to a suitor's initial professions of ardor. Why? Because he can't help wondering: Is this her usual response to pursuit?

Bona fide interest is whetted, he says, if a man must use patience, foresight and a bit of persistence to line up dates in the early rounds;—so be a blithe spirit in courtship, if you would evoke a marriage proposal. Keep your deeper feelings under cover and under control until afterwards—when as a wife your generous, warmhearted, single minded devotion will be better appreciated.

Divorcee Takes The Wrong Tack

NEVER treat a suitor as a wailing wall. You may discuss small problems with him. These will be welcome, if you broach them in the spirit of consulting what he fondly hopes is his superior judgment—and registering charming deference to it.

But never tax him with serious concerns, personal trials or anxious emotions, if you have any. He is looking to you for sweetness and light, and won't be psychologically prepared to accept your major problems as his until he has been your husband for a while, says our expert.

You get the drift? And surely you see it's directly opposite from the tack you've taken with the widower. You've pretty well hung yourself in relation to him; and at this point your one slim chance of evoking a marriage proposal and negotiating a formal engagement consists in switching 90 per cent of your attention from him to other time-consuming projects—and acting quite cheerful and forwardlooking (in other directions) in doing so. M. H.

Town Talk—

June Warren's War Zone Wedding More Thrilling Than Radio's Soap Opera

By Eva Hinton

BLOND June Warren, radio star and daughter of Vice Air Marshal and Mrs. Robin Willock, has literally lived a more romantic and thrilling part than any soap opera script writer could imagine.

She and her husband were practically married 'mid shot and shell, when he was helping the United States Army chase the Germans out of the low countries and she was acting in the British equivalent of a USO show in Amsterdam, while the Jerries were still clinging tenaciously to one half of the town.

A lawyer in one of those plural-named New York firms, William is now out of the Army and living with June on Long Island. She is waiting to take up her New York radio work until she can find someone to care for the apple of her eye, her 15-month-old son, Robert Peel Warren.

YOUNG Robert Peel showed pretty the other afternoon that he can take care of himself and everyone on his "beat." Like the famous London "Bobbies" (named after the founder of the corps, little Robert's ancestor, Sir Robert Peel) the tot carried a big stick but ruled with kindness. The "stick" was borrowed from one of the guests at a small cocktail party given by Mr. and Mrs. Warren in the Willocks' apartment at the Shoreham. Policing the party, young Robert Peel never let the long stick get in anybody's way, least of all his own! The only help he needed while making his rounds was an occasional boost by the seat of his pants when he tried to climb a chair and survey the scene.

Among the guests welcoming the Warrens for their visit to Washington were Gen. and Mrs. George McDonald, Gen. and Mrs. James K. Crane (General Crane was best man at the Warrens' wedding), Brig. Charles Lindemann of the British Embassy, the British Naval Attache and Mrs. Wootten, Miss Irene Boyle, Mrs. Ira Eaker, Mrs. F. J. D. Pemberton, wife of the Canadian Naval Attache, and Mr. and Mrs. Russell Stuart.

Tall Arthur Christie was easy to find in the gathering. Making the party one of their farewell appearances, were the David Robertsons who will soon leave for their new house on Cape Cod.

Over Zealous Calorie Cutter Kidding Self

By Ida Jean Kain

I'll let you in on a scientific secret that governs weight—it's the law of diminishing returns, which applies even to calorie cutting. In the long run you can reduce the excess weight just as fast by eating all the calories you are entitled to have on a reducing diet, as you could by cutting calories too low.

Let's say your reducing calories are 1200 a day, and on that number you can lose one to two pounds a week. But you're in a hurry, and strong-minded, and figure you could reduce twice as fast on 950 calories a day. That would work only for a short time. Then nature would step in and economize on calories, and by throwing your system into low gear, fewer calories would be used. It's the calorie deficit established between the amount used and the amount consumed that sets the reducing rate.

Many Considerations

Regarding your reducing calorie quota, that depends on a number of things, including size, shape, tissue composition, temperament and activity. An extra tall woman, doing active work, could reduce on 1500 calories a day. A very short woman, doing light work, must limit her reducing calories to 1000 a day.

The food essentials can be included on 1000 calories a day. Then if you are entitled to two or three hundred calories more, take them in your favorite foods. A protective diet means just that . . . milk, 1 pint a day to protect teeth, bones and the nervous system.

Protein Repairs Tissues

High protein for tissue repair and to stimulate the burning of calories is furnished in ¼ pound of lean meat or fish, plus an egg and a serving of cheese or second egg.

Adequate minerals and vitamins needed for smooth running can be supplied in three fresh vegetables daily, plus a raw vegetable, and two fresh fruits, one a citrus. And the B vitamins by having a whole grain cereal and a slice of whole grain bread; or three thin slices of 100 per cent whole grain bread. Butter should be limited to 1 pat. And water . . . plenty of water, between meals.

Boogie-Woogie on Trial In WINX Poll

DARING YOUNG MAN

WINX waker-upper Hugh Guidi is doing some research on the preferences of his listeners.

He's been asking the customers to write in and tell him whether they prefer smooth stuff in the morning, or whether they're strong enough to stand boogie on an empty stomach.

Giving the listeners a voice in radio programming is a wonderful idea, Hugh—but isn't it a bit risky?

Suppose somebody rings in a third party on you, and the election is won by votes for silence"?

BUSINESS NOTE

The Federal Trade Commission is quietly investigating the used car market. So far, they won't say what they're looking for, or suspect.

TOKENS

Children's Hospital's building fund will probably benefit from the illegibility of some folks' handwriting.

Capital Transit has offered to refund cash to those who drop tokens into fare boxes by mistake. The passenger is given a card to fill out, and then the company sends him his money.

But sometimes transit employes can't read the names and addresses on those cards, so they have to do some guessing. They send the refunds to what they hope is the correct address.

Many of those letters have been coming back marked "unknown at this address." A Capital Transit spokesman says:

"We're going to hold these refunds for a few days to see if any of them are claimed. If they're not, they'll go to Children's Hospital."

PRONUNCIATION

E. W. P. of 2418 Taylor ave., Alexandria, Va., adds a few comments to our recent item about the pronunciation of "Buckingum." She says:

"If you think that one's bad, how about 'Featherstonehaugh?' The dear old English pronounce it 'Fanshaw.' And of course 'St. John' is pronounced 'Sinjun' don'cha know. See how simple it is?"

EXPLANATION

An alert District Liner called up the other day to ask "How does the telephone dial system distinguish between 'Tower' numbers and 'Union' numbers?"

"I don't follow you," I replied. "They're two different exchanges, aren't they?"

"Yeah," was the provocative answer, "but look at your dial. You dial exactly the same two numbers for 'Tower' as you do for 'Union.'"

My caller was right, of course, so I got after the phone company for an explanation, and here it is:

There are other duplications, as well as the one already noted. "Shepherd" and "Silver Spring" are dialed exactly alike, and so are "Sligo" and "Pleasant;" and "Oliver" and "Olympic."

In each case the two similar exchanges are served by the same central office equipment. But because the various exchanges serve different areas, the subscribers are charged different rates—and that's why they're assigned to separate exchanges.

Just in case you're wondering—there are no duplicating numbers on such "double" exchanges. That's why you always get the right party, if you dial the right number.

HOT WEATHER NOTE

In the 5100 block of North 1st st., Arlington Forest, you'll find that Christmas decorations are still on display.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

The Bridge Deck

By Florence Osborn

Clarence G. Meeks and Ernest Cardoza played this board in duplicate and stopped at six no-trump. Cardoza was confident his partner had the ace of spades on his opening bid. After he bid four diamonds, Ernest went to six no-trump. He said that he wanted to bid the "grand" but used restraint.

Allan MacRossie, jr., and Stewart W. Bowers bid and made seven diamonds, using the Blackwood convention. At diamonds, or no-trump, South has 13 cold tricks, a spade, four hearts, four diamonds and four clubs. If North becomes declarer he is down one at seven diamonds.

The other members of the team, Frank Kley and Harold Colvi chose the suit with the worst adverse distribution, hearts, but they were wise enough to bid no higher than the five-level. They took what they bid for; 11 tricks.

Opponents Walter Beinecke and partner won top on the board by bidding and making a grand slam at no-trump. But the Columbia team still won the match, for another opposing pair bid four hearts, making five, and at the last table they bid seven hearts, down two.

George Watts and Frank D. Shaw, defended against seven hearts and George very cleverly did not double although he held the six trumps. There was danger that the opponents would pull out to seven no-trump, which couldn't be topped.

At hearts declarer can take 11 tricks; a spade and two spade ruffs, three hearts, two diamonds and three clubs.
